

Iranian terrorists kill two U.S. servicemen

TEHRAN (UPI) — A terrorist execution squad shot to death two U.S. Air Force advisers to the Iranian armed forces Wednesday in a "premeditated" precision assassination on a Tehran street. An underground Marxist group claimed responsibility for the daylight ambush.

The officers, attached to the 1,000-man U.S. Advisory Mission in Tehran, were identified by the American Embassy as Col. Paul R. Shaffer, 45, of Dayton, Ohio, and Lt. Col. Jack H. Turner, 45, of Carbondale, Ill.

Both officers were married. Shaffer had two children and Turner had three. The U.S. Embassy said their bodies would be flown home today.

"There is no doubt it was a premeditated assassination by professional murderers," an official at the U.S. Embassy said.

The U.S. State Department condemned the murders as a "terrorist act of calculated brutality against American personnel assigned to duties in a country with which we enjoy close and friendly relations."

An embassy statement said the gunmen, riding in two automobiles, waylaid Shaffer and Turner as they started off for work in their chauffeured car.

The assailants ordered the Iranian driver to hit the car floor, pumped small arms fire into the two officers, and sped away in a third vehicle, the statement said.

An anonymous telephone caller to Iranian news agencies shortly after the 6:30 a.m. slaying said:

"This is the organization of the Crusaders of the Iranian Nation. Today two U.S. officers were executed in retaliation for the murder in the prison of Iran of nine of our members."

This was a reference to nine "Crusaders" executed last year for murder, terrorism, arson and conspiracy to topple the monarchy.

The telephone caller said, "Further retaliatory steps will continue to be taken."

There are 18,000 Americans living in Iran, a nation of 30 million, and two other U.S. officers have been assassination targets in the past three years. A report of the slaying awaited Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi on his return from a five-nation tour, and a government official said: "The Shah was deeply touched to hear of the assassination by terrorists of these dedicated men."

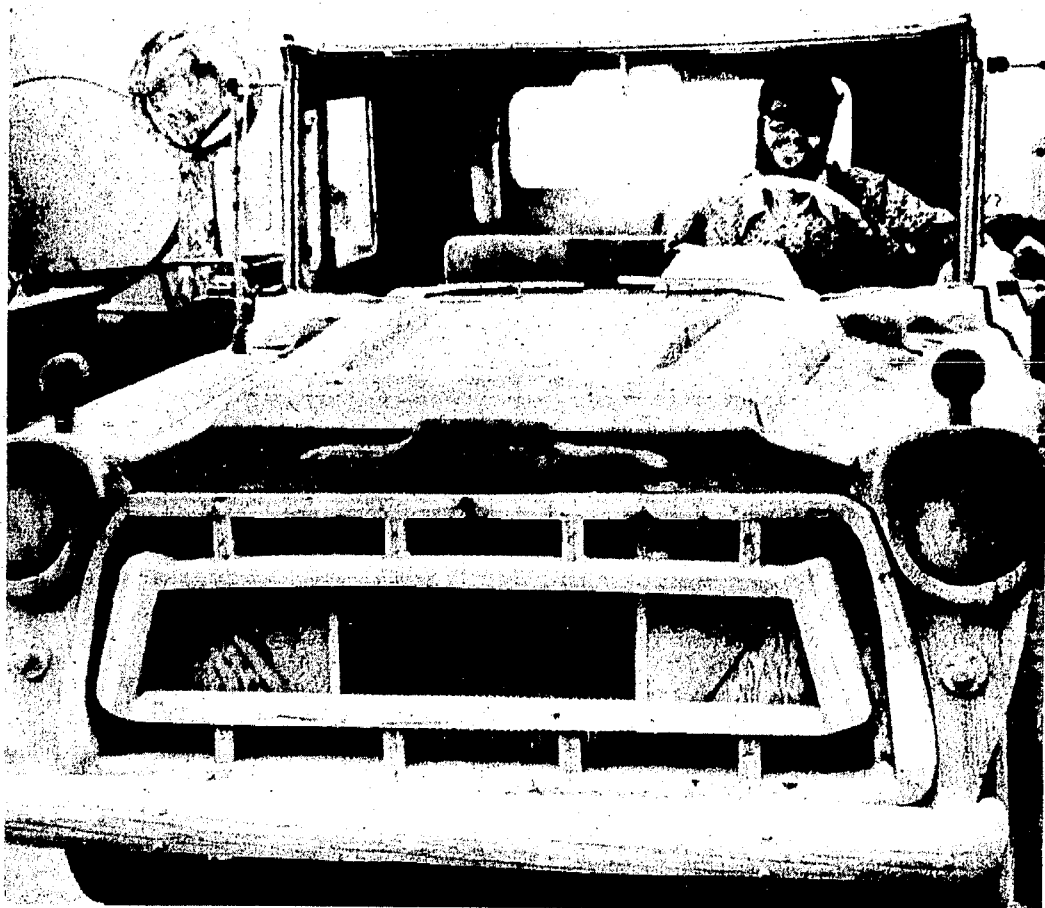

As police and security agents mounted a "vigorous" search for the killers, the government vowed through a spokesman that "no action will be spared to find the murderers and bring them to justice."

The U.S. Embassy statement said: "As the officers were being driven to their duties, a car pulled out to block their progress on the street, another car rammed them from behind."

"According to an eyewitness, three men got out of the automobile and after ordering the driver of the car carrying the officials to get down on the floor of the car, shot the two officers several times as they fell to the floor."

"The terrorists then got into a third car and made their escape."

The statement did not say what happened to the driver.

SYMBOLIC PROTEST — Paul Alberth, an art major at Indiana University of Pennsylvania, thinks too many vehicles clutter America's highways so he decided to build a full-size pickup truck completely out of wood, as a protest gesture. It is a replica of a 1957 Chevrolet, 16 feet long, 6 feet, four inches wide. The truck is complete with a wooden exhaust system, broke linings, axles and leaf springs. It is held together by dowels. It took more than three months to build. (UPI)

Africans kidnap 3 U.S. students

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — Three American students—two girls and a boy—and a Dutch woman were kidnaped at gunpoint from a wildlife research station in Tanzania by 40 armed and uniformed Africans who said they were from the neighboring republic of Zaire, U.S. Embassy sources said Wednesday.

The sources said the raid took place Monday night. Witnesses said the raiders arrived at the research station on Lake Tanganyika by boat and left with their captives the same way.

The invaders, armed with machine guns, rifles and pistols, fought with staff members at the research station near Kigoma in Northwestern Tanzania, the sources said. There was no report of any casualties.

Officials of Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif., identified the kidnaped Americans as Barbara B. Smuts, 24, of Ann Arbor, Mich., Carrie Jane Hunter, 21, of Atherton, Calif., and Kenneth S. Smith, 22, of Garden Grove, Calif. They said the Dutch woman, Emilie Bergman, was an administrative assistant at the station.

The missing students were among about 30 working at the research station run by Jane Goodall, author of books and television commentaries on the behavior of chimpanzees.

The U.S. Embassy asked the Tanzanian government to investigate the kidnappings and said the American Embassy in the Zaire capital of Kinshasa had been notified in case the students had been taken across the border.

Diplomatic sources said the raiding Africans from Zaire, on the other side of Lake Tanganyika from Tanzania, might be guerrillas opposed to the government of Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Robert L. Funseth said that the U.S. Embassy at Dar es Salaam, the Tanzanian capital, had notified the State Department of the kidnappings. "Every effort will be made to secure the release of the students," he said.

Laotians seize AID facility

VIENTIANE (UPI) — A mob of about 200 Laotian leftists demanding the ouster of all Americans with the U.S. Agency for International Development seized the AID compound in Vientiane Wednesday, trapping an American civilian and two Marines who had orders to "hold the fort."

The early morning seizure of the compound was the latest in a series of anti-American outbursts in Laos, which is all but under complete Communist control since the flight into exile of rightist generals and cabinet ministers in the wake of the fall of Cambodia and South Vietnam.

Twelve Americans were still under house arrest by leftist students in Savannakhet, the former right-wing stronghold in Central Laos which was taken over by the Communist Pathet Lao Tuesday. U.S. Embassy officials said they had lost radiotelephone contact with the six U.S. AID officials and their wives, although they believed they were safe.

In Vientiane U.S. charge d'affaires Christian Chapman met with Prime Minister Souvanna Phouma and Foreign Minister Phoumi Vongvichit, the ranking Communist official in the coalition government, to protest the seizure of the U.S. compound.

Both Souvanna and Phoumi assured Chapman the situation would be resolved, a U.S. official said.

Living cost rose again in April

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The cost of living increased by 0.6 per cent in April, due mainly to a sharp rise in food prices after a two-month decline, the government reported Wednesday.

At the same time, the take-home pay of the typical American worker declined 0.1 per cent last month to a level 4.1 per cent below the same period a year ago.

President Ford had anticipated a larger CPI increase in March and in April on the basis of a bigger rise in food prices, White House press secretary Ron Nessen said. He added "I think the figures of the past several months show inflation is subsiding from the pace of 1974."

The Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said the retail cost of food went up 0.4 per cent in April, pushing the increase over the past 12 months to nearly 8 per cent.

Non-food commodities rose 0.8 per cent, to a level 11 per cent above April, 1974, and the cost of services went up 0.6 per cent—also 11 per cent higher than a year ago.

The effect of inflation was compounded by the downward slide of earnings, shown in a separate bureau report and based on the amount an average blue-collar worker takes home after deduction of federal income tax and Social Security.

Inflation continues to simmer, the report indicated, but is nowhere near last year's boiling point.

The Consumer Price Index for April stood at 158.6, using 1967 as the base year. This means that goods and services selling for $10 that year cost $15.86 last month.

The report listed these rises in retail prices over the past 12 months: cereal and bakery products, 17 per cent; restaurant meals, 11 per cent; alcoholic beverages, 10 per cent; fuel oil and coal, 11 per cent; new cars, 13 per cent; used cars, 29 per cent; rent, 16 per cent, and medical care, 15 per cent.

Will announce candidacy

President likes his job

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford Wednesday told Republican leaders he will announce his candidacy for a full presidential term within one month.

Ford met with state and county GOP chairmen from major urban areas at the White House—the third such session in less than 24 hours—and told them he was confident he could win the nomination next year, then be elected to a full term.

Party officials who met with Ford relayed the word to reporters and said they were delighted by Ford's disclosure.

William V. Lawson, chairman of the Memphis-Shelby County Republican organization said Ford "did indicate he was going to be a definite candidate for re-election and that in all probability his announcement would come within a month."

Lawson said he thought Ford had "done an excellent job" and "his stock certainly went up tremendously last week"—a reference to the President's handling of the Mayaguez crisis.

"I think he'll get full support in Tennessee," Lawson said.

Nancy P. Appar, party chairman in the Oklahoma City area, said that she agreed with other party officials that "the Mayaguez incident certainly strengthened his position in Oklahoma City," but she said in Oklahoma there is a groundswell for Ronald Reagan.

She said that it was too early to predict with certainty that Ford would get the party's nomination for a full term.

She said that Ford explained to GOP leaders he had delayed his formal announcement of candidacy "because of the new campaign expenditures law and all the mechanics that have to go into becoming a declared candidate."

The party leaders said Ford made it absolutely clear he will be a candidate and will run in some primaries.

Lawson said that Ford brought up the subject of his candidacy "right off the bat."

One member of the delegation said Ford's performance in the Mayaguez crisis showed he "is forward enough and strong enough to take a position and follow through and make a decision fast enough, rather than dilly-dallying and procrastinating."

The meeting came just hours after Ford met with Republican senators, who told reporters the President's handling of the Mayaguez situation and brightening prospects for an economic upturn may make him unbeatable at the polls.

Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott said the Mayaguez incident "could only help" in Ford's campaign for election to the office he holds by appointment.

The only Republican senator meeting with Ford who did not reflect Scott's optimism was Lowell Weicker of Connecticut—although he called the President's handling of the Mayaguez situation "a clear plus."

Court denies separate trial to Monroe PennDOT boss

STROUDSBURG — A federal judge in Scranton has denied a motion for separate trial filed by William F. Heller superintendent of highways for Monroe County who has been indicted for perjury and extortion.

Heller filed the request in March, asking the court to grant one trial for two charges of extortion and another trial for a single count of perjury before a federal grand jury.

He was indicted last February in connection with an alleged kickback scandal involving snow removal contracts in Monroe County during 1973.

Heller is charged with demanding a total of $700 from two Pocono Lake contractors in separate incidents and he is also charged with lying under oath to a federal grand jury which investigated the charges.

Heller pleaded innocent to all charges.

In a related development, the state Justice Department has turned over reports on its investigation of the allegations against Heller to the Monroe County District Attorney's office.

Dist. Atty. James F. Marsh confirmed Wednesday that his office had received the synopsis of state investigations, but said his office would await the outcome of federal prosecution before determining a course of action.

"We have to wait to see what the federal government is going to do," Marsh said. "They are considerably ahead of us, having already gone through the indictment stage. If there are convictions, we may be precluded from doing anything."

Marsh said the possibility of

for the Middle District of Pennsylvania by a former state deputy attorney general and a Montgomery County woman challenging the "color" statute and two other provisions of the state election code.

The former state official, Ira H. Kemp of Harrisburg, and the woman, Yrminda Fortes of Conshohocken, charged the three state statutes contested by the suit conflicted with the U.S. Constitution and federal voting rights laws.

The three federal judges — Chief District Judge Michael

H. Sheridan, District Judge William J. Nealon and Circuit Judge Ruggero J. Aldisert — said in dismissing the suit:

1. Fortes and Kemp, both blacks, lacked standing to challenge an 1869 statute allowing Philadelphia to levy a special tax for election expenses, a tax Kemp and Fortes contended was actually a poll tax.

2. The state is permitted to require potential voters to list physical characteristics, including their "color," when they register to vote.

"Particularly because 'color' is merely one of several identifying characteristics that must be recorded on an individual's registration card, we find that Pennsylvania's race recordation requirement for voter registration is intended to, and actually does, further the legitimate state goal of prevention of voter fraud."

3. Another provision of the election code which permits election officials to reject voting applicants who omit information required by law when they fill out registration forms "does not amount to a stated violation of the Constitution" in cases where registrars reject applicants who decline to list their "color" on registration forms.

"There is a great difference between rejecting an applicant because of his race and rejecting an applicant because of his failure to answer relevant questions needed to assist election officials in preventing voter fraud," the judges ruled.

The ruling did say, however, that "a liberal reading of the complaint reveals at most an allegation of an abridgement of voting rights in the sense that a person who does not wish to have his race recorded on his registration card may be precluded from registering to vote."

But the opinion added, "Such an allegation fails to describe a true restriction of the right to vote. If plaintiffs' argument were correct, any qualification placed on the right to vote, even the basic requirement of registration itself, would constitute an unlawful abridgement of the voting rights of any person who for esoteric reasons declined to fulfill the qualification."

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted Wednesday to continue the present maximum 65 weeks of unemployment insurance benefits through the middle of 1976.

In addition, a special program paying up to 26 weeks of unemployment benefits to those not covered by the regular unemployment insurance program would be extended and increased to 39 weeks.

The legislation was approved 381-8. With members mindful of the current 8.9 per cent national unemployment rate, it drew little opposition.

Advisers urge President to impose energy plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's advisers have unanimously urged him to impose his own energy conservation program — which includes a new oil import tariff hike — if Congress fails to act on one before the end of the week, the White House said Wednesday.

Because there is little chance Congress will take any energy action before starting its Memorial Day recess Friday, White House sources said, it seems likely Ford will boost the import tariff to $2 per barrel next month.

They said the President is tired of waiting for congressional action and worried by the indication that "there won't be any short-term actions by Congress" to force conservation and slow petroleum imports.

Ford's plans for forging his own energy program actions took shape amid predictions by Federal Energy Administration officials that foreign oil prices might go up by between 57 cents and $1.75 per barrel in September and reports that some oil industry officials were preparing for a $2 increase.

Present world oil prices, set by the Organization of Producing and Exporting Countries, range from $11 to $12 per barrel.

White House spokesman Ron Nessen said Ford met for more than an hour Wednesday to discuss energy strategy with his top advisers but did not reach any final decision on what to do or when to do it.

Nessen said, however, he expects the President will decide whether to go ahead with the tariff increase and an announced plan to remove price controls from so-called "old" domestic oil before departing on a trip to Europe next Wednesday.

Ford's advisers had a "unanimity in the thrust of their recommendations" that the President should act unilaterally "if Congress has not acted" by the end of this week, Nessen said.

The House Ways and Means Committee has fashioned a bill that would discourage fuel consumption by slowly raising gasoline taxes, prodding Detroit to build more fuel efficient cars.

Ford's approach is to sharply boost gasoline and fuel oil prices by removing oil price controls and imposing import excise taxes. Congressional Democrats say this is inflationary and would not increase production, but backers of Ford's plan — mostly Republicans and oil-state Democrats — successfully stalled action on the Ways and Means plan by proposing numerous amendments.

Mine bill veto vote postponed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democrats postponed Wednesday an attempt to override President Ford's veto of strip mining legislation, alleging "wild charges" by the administration would have made the move futile.

In a close vote, the House postponed action on the over-ride until June 10 to give environmentalists time to muster the necessary two-thirds majority required to overturn a veto.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., floor manager for the bill, said he would call Interior Committee hearings beginning June 2 to make administration officials back up their claims of the bill's effect.

The measure, similar to one "pocket vetoed" by Ford last December, would set federal standards for surface mining of coal and requirements for reclaiming disturbed land.

Ford and federal energy administrator Frank Zarb have estimated that 36,000 jobs would be lost by the bill's enactment; domestic coal production would be severely curtailed, and utility rates would increase.

"I think it is in the best interest of the nation to postpone this vote until the wild charges of the administration are either sustained or refuted by the facts," Udall said.

Just before the 208-195 House vote to delay action, Speaker Carl Albert told reporters the outcome was "doubtful."

"We're not sure we've got enough votes," Albert said.

Stars endorsing products may be forced to use them

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government proposed Wednesday that stars who endorse advertised products should use those products — so, if Joe Namath doesn't really use a Hamilton Beach popcorn popper, he'd better get one fast.

But even the federal government claims to have a sense of humor, and a spokesman said the New York Jets' quarterback might not have to wear those pantyhose just to back up a commercial which is clearly played for laughs.

The Federal Trade Commission published a set of new actual-use requirements in the Federal Register which could eventually force a lot of celebrities to eat, drink, drive, wear and otherwise use the products they extol in print and broadcast ads.

One section of the new rules became effective immediately and governs the use of so-called "experts" in drug ads. From now on, lay persons may not endorse drugs if they do not have actual expertise in the field.

Another, more sweeping, section of the guidelines covers the actual-use principle and would not become effective for at least 60 days. The FTC will accept written comment on the proposals during that period.

This section says that persons represented in commercials as consumers of the product — including celebrities — must really be typical consumers.

In addition, if actors are used to portray a typical consumer, the ad must say so.

"Where the advertisement represents that the endorser uses the product, he must be a bona fide user of the product," the FTC said. "Such an endorsement may be used only as long as the advertiser has a good reason to believe that the endorser continues to be a bona fide user of the product."

The endorsers will also be expected to give their "honest views" and not just mouth advertising copy they do not really believe.

And so, for example, Danny Thomas will really have to drink Maxwell House coffee with gusto if he does not already do so, and Hank Aaron will have to start at least some of his days with a bowl of Wheaties.

Seeks interior secretary post

Hathaway closer to confirmation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Interior Committee voted Wednesday to recommend confirmation of former Wyoming Gov. Stanley K. Hathaway as interior secretary after deciding his directorship of a hometown bank while governor had not been a conflict of interest.

The vote was 10 to 4, with Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., who was absent, asking later that his vote be recorded in favor of confirmation.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, joined three Democrats who had announced their opposition to Hathaway in advance in voting against confirmation of the former Republican governor, whose nomination was strongly opposed by environmentalists.

The vote followed final testimony by a committee counsel who went to Wyoming to investigate the possibility of a conflict of interest because of Hathaway's association with the Citizens National Bank and Trust Co. of Torrington, Wyo., his hometown.

The investigation was triggered by Hathaway's voluntary admission that he had forgotten $13,000 in director's fees received from the bank in reporting his outside income as governor.

"I think it's very clear there is no conflict of interest, or misuse of authority, no illegal conduct," Sen. J. Bennett Johnston Jr., D-La., said after hearing the testimony.

Johnston was one of five Democrats voting for confirmation. The others were Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.; Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, and Sen. Lee Metcalf, D-Mont.

Church, like Bumpers, was absent but left his proxy with Jackson.

Owen Malone, a committee counsel, told the committee his investigation had not turned up any evidence that either Hathaway or the bank profited from the fact that he was governor while also on the bank's board of directors.

Malone said Wyoming did not have a state conflict of interest law that would have prohibited the governor's association with the bank.

Hathaway's nomination by President Ford was opposed by spokesmen for numerous environmental and conservationist organizations, who charged he had favored industrial development over preservation of the environment while governor.

What's news

GM recalls 50,000 cars

DETROIT — General Motors said Wednesday it is recalling 50,000 current model cars in three separate campaigns because of steering, accelerator and air conditioning defects. GM said the recalls involved 1975 model Chevrolets, Pontiacs, Oldsmobiles and Buicks, some with more than one defect. There was one accident reported as a result of a steering control defect, but no injuries, a GM spokesman said. The GM recall announcement was the third in the industry in two days.

Striking doctors reject offer

SAN FRANCISCO — San Francisco hospitals, some facing bankruptcy because of a three-week doctors' strike, offered Wednesday to pay malpractice insurance premiums for anesthesiologists if they would come back to work. Leaders of the boycott rejected the offer. The urgency of the growing crisis over skyrocketing insurance rates was expressed by government and hospital officials across the nation. Doctors, many of whom fear they will be forced out of practice if the situation isn't improved, intensified their protests. A California surgeon failed a class action antitrust suit accusing five insurance companies of conspiring to fix prices for malpractice insurance.

Sirhan parole blasted

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — State Treasurer Jesse Unruh, who stood with Sen. Robert F. Kennedy the night he was assassinated, Wednesday demanded the resignation of two Adult Authority members who voted to give convicted assassin Sirhan B. Sirhan parole in 1966. Unruh, Kennedy's presidential campaign chairman in California in 1968, blasted the board's decision to treat Sirhan as an ordinary inmate, giving him a parole date of Feb. 23, 1966, as "the height of asininity." "When we allow a madman to take the lives of our top elected officials and our top private citizens and say there is no difference, then there is something wrong with that system," Unruh said.

300 heart pacemakers recalled

WASHINGTON — Citing the need for tighter federal control over manufacturers, the Food and Drug Administration said Wednesday another 300 electronic heart pacemakers and related equipment are being recalled following the deaths of two children. While the art of pacemaker technology is better than ever, FDA Commissioner Alexander M. Schmidt said, there is still a need for tighter laws to clear medical devices before they reach the consuming public. The recall brought the number of confirmed and suspected fatalities among pacemaker patients since 1972 to 28 — 10 of them confirmed. About 125,000 Americans use the surgically implanted devices to keep their hearts beating regularly.

McCrane fined $20,000

SCRANTON — Former New Jersey State Treasurer Joseph M. McCrane was fined $20,000 and given three years probation Wednesday for devising an illegal tax writeoff scheme for the 1969 campaign of former Gov. William T. Cahill. The 50-year-old Rancocas, N.J., resident showed little emotion when he was sentenced by U.S. District Court Judge William J. Nealon. McCrane faced up to 12 years in prison and fines of up to $40,000 on the four tax counts. On May 15, Judge Nealon refused to order a new trial for McCrane, convicted Dec. 11 of helping three businesses bilk the federal government out of $17,000 in taxes by disguising donations to Cahill's campaign as legitimate business expenses.

Scali successor nominated

WASHINGTON — The White House announced Wednesday President Ford will nominate Daniel P. Moynihan, former ambassador to India, to be the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations succeeding John A. Scali. Scali has represented the United States at the United Nations since February 2, 1973. He has been offered "another senior foreign policy position," the White House said. In New York, Scali said he was considering the offer "along with several opportunities to return to private life." Before entering federal service in 1971, Scali was a correspondent for the American Broadcasting Company. Moynihan, who has friendly ties with Third World countries, was ambassador to India from 1973 to 1975.

Democrats make changes in housing, jobs proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senior Democrats on the House and Senate Banking Committees Wednesday modified a bill designed to restore life to a homebuilding industry suffering 40 per cent unemployment.

In hopes of overriding an expected veto, the measure was changed to retain only temporary "emergency" provisions.

These are designed to spur creation of 400,000 houses and 800,000 jobs; make $2 billion available for construction of rental units; offer loans to jobless homeowners facing foreclosure, and extend a program which offers 3 per cent loans to homeowners who rehabilitate existing houses.

Dropped from the bill was a permanent program, which was to have started July 1, 1976, under which 8 per cent subsidized mortgage loans would have been made automatically available in future homebuilding slumps.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said the bill was toned down to retain enough Democrats and to woo some breakaway Republicans to override a veto.

Reuss said a veto was unavoidable.

"They're mad downtown on the passions of vetoing this bill and they're going to veto anything we send them," he said. "So there's no use trying to placate them."

Rep. Thomas Ludlow Ashley, D-Ohio, had predicted defeat for the bill in the predominantly Democratic House had the changes not been made. He said no hearings had been held on the permanent "countercyclical" program of interest subsidies.

The modification was agreed upon without a formal meeting of the House-Senate conferees who had approved the measure last week over Ashley's objections.

Republicans were uncertain Wednesday whether to go along, but the Democrats had enough strength to send the bill to the House and Senate floors without them. Reuss said the House vote would come about June 4.

The new version retained a provision offering homebuyers a choice of one of three benefits — a 7 per cent loan for the life of the mortgage; a 6 per cent loan phasing out over six years; or a $1,000 cash grant to help make a down payment.

The tax bill enacted in March offered a tax credit of up to $2,000 to buyers of built but unsold new houses.

The bill also would authorize the Department of Housing and Urban Development to use $2 billion to purchase mortgages on condominiums and multi-family rental housing. Previously the money was earmarked only for single-family homes.

Kissinger reassures Berliners

BERLIN (UPI) — Omitting all reference to the U.S. role in Asia, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger Wednesday reaffirmed Washington's unwavering support of West Berlin. He said "America will never seek peace by abandoning principles or sacrificing friends."

Kissinger, the first American cabinet officer to visit West Berlin in three years, told the House of Deputies that Russia's attitude toward West Berlin will provide the "acid test" of his other attempts to generally ease West-East confrontation.

The Secretary of State spent only 4½ hours in the city, sandwiching his visit between an overnight stay in the West German capital of Bonn and a flight on to Ankara, for a meeting with the Central Treaty Organization nations including Turkey, Britain, Iran and Pakistan.

Kissinger arrived in Ankara at 9:15 p.m. (2:15 p.m. EDT) for the CENTO meeting scheduled to open in the Turkish capital today.

'Lost' VA patient spurs investigation

CHICAGO (UPI) — The head of the Veterans Administration dispatched two officials to Hines Veterans Hospital Wednesday to find out how and why a patient who could not speak was lost in a wheelchair — apparently misplaced by an attendant and unnoticed by hundreds of persons — for 27 hours.

A VA spokesman said VA Administrator Richard L. Roudebush directed the investigators to determine exactly what happened to ex-Marine Erwin Pawelski, to recommend disciplinary action if warranted and to guard against a repetition at any of the VA's 170 hospitals.

Pawelski, 54, victim of a cerebral hemorrhage, was buried Wednesday — three days after he died and 20 days after he was "misplaced" while on a routine wheelchair trip between his room and occupational therapy.

Donald LaRoque, administrative assistant to Hines' chief of staff, said Pawelski's death "had no association or connection" with his 27-hour ordeal. He said tests after Pawelski was found showed that he had suffered no ill effects from the incident.

Vern Rogers, a VA public relations official, said Pawelski was strapped into his wheelchair and wheeled out of his ward, apparently by a volunteer worker assigned to take him to therapy, at 9:30 a.m. on May 1.

"There's a presumption he arrived (in a basement room) for therapy," he said. "But they're not positive."

What happened after that is anybody's guess, although there is a supposition that Pawelski was wheeled back to an elevator. He was found at 1:10 p.m. on May 2.

Pawelski, who had been given little chance to recover from the brain hemorrhage, underwent brain surgery on May 12. On Sunday he lapsed into a coma and died.

Consumer unit may win yet

The consumer rights movement of the 1970s superficially resembles the civil rights movement of the previous decade. In both instances, long pent-up grievances found expression in demands for corrective federal legislation, much of which was enacted despite stiff opposition.

Now, with the 94th Congress feeling more militant, consumer groups are confident of scoring their biggest legislative victory yet. For the past five years, they have been lobbying for a bill to establish a federal Consumer Protection Agency. Such bills were approved by one house of Congress or the other in the last four years, but failed to win final passage. The closest approach was last year, when the Senate came within two votes of halting a filibuster on a House-passed consumer protection measure.

Since the 94th Congress contains many more liberal members than the 93rd did, it looks as if the Consumer Protection Agency bill will have smoother sailing. The forces opposing it suffered a serious loss with the departure of Sam J. Ervin Jr. from the Senate. Ervin, a key participant in the civil rights filibusters of the 1960s, teamed up with Sen. James D. Allen (D-Ala.) in 1974 to talk the proposed agency to death.

Opponents of a Consumer Protection Agency fear it would harass both businessmen and regulatory agencies, and they probably are right. For the agency envisioned by consumer groups would have ample power to act as a super gadfly. It could, in fact, function as a sort of regulator of the regulators.

As passed by the House, last year's bill would have allowed the new agency to represent consumer interests in the activities of other federal agencies, request other agencies to use their subpoena power to gather information, and appeal agency rulings and decisions to the courts. In reporting the bill to the floor, the House Government Operations Committee insisted that the measure would merely give the consumer agency rights available to other parties in federal administrative procedures and would not usurp other agencies' authority.

"Contrary to the fears of some opponents of the bill," the committee asserted, "the CPA will not be looking over the shoulders or breathing down the necks or listening in on the conversations of the agency regulators. In this sense, it is not a watchdog but rather a responsible advocate."

Just as the landmark civil rights bills of the 1960s failed to usher in the millennium for blacks and other minority groups, an activist Consumer Protection Agency cannot be expected to banish shoddy workmanship and price gouging by fiat. "You will never succeed," consumer advocate Ralph Nader said at East Stroudsburg State College. "All you're trying to do is reduce problems to the level of tolerability." In Nader's opinion, "no more than 10 per cent of what any consumer law tells the executive branch to do ever gets done. In some cases, the percentage is much less."

We agree, but consumer groups consider the battle for an independent agency well worth fighting. The increasing variety and complexity of consumer products, they say, cry out for a federal overseer. Millions of Americans are likely to respond favorably to this argument as they try to get the most for their money in a time of mounting inflation and deepening recession.

Couldn't hold out

A computer was set up to notify magazine subscribers by mail when it was time to renew their subscriptions. One day it went sour and before anyone realized the miscue, a farmer in Montana received 11,834 letters telling him his subscription had expired.

The local postmaster had to hire a special truck to deliver all the letters. After the farmer had read about 200 of them, all exactly alike, he sat down and wrote out a check renewing his subscription. Attached to the check was a note which said, "I give up. My check is enclosed."

Graham Martin roadblock to South Viet evacuation

Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — President Ford's own files dispute his statements and confirm our charges about Ambassador Graham Martin's handling of the Vietnam evacuation.

After we reported that Martin had badly botched the evacuation effort, the President defended him Martin did a "good job" and directed a "successful evacuation," said Ford.

This is not what the confidential White House records show. We have had access to some of these documents. We have also interviewed key people who were involved in the evacuation, including some of the refugees themselves.

The President outlined his objectives at a secret strategy session April 9 in the conference room next to his oval office. His first concern, he said, was to save "about 6,000 Americans now in South Vietnam."

But he also declared firmly: "A large number of South Vietnamese have worked for the U.S. at great personal peril. Roughly 175,000 to 200,000 will be the first to suffer . . . I think there's a moral responsibility for us to help those people who helped us."

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, according to the confidential minutes, stressed that the "removal must be handled so as to avoid panic." He reflected the views of his man in Saigon, the implacable Graham Martin who kept dragging his heels.

A few senators, privy to the developments in Saigon, became alarmed over the slow pace of the evacuation. In response to their inquiries the President invited the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to the White House on April 14 for a briefing, which he stressed "must be an executive (secret) session."

"Mr. President," pleaded Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., "could you order that every seat be filled on every outgoing plane?"

Ford said that Kissinger had already given Martin orders which "should achieve that."

"We felt the President should be sure through some agent other than Martin that your orders are being urgently carried out," interjected Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y. "Our first priority must be to bring every American out and Vietnamese . . . as can be brought out."

"The orders that we have given will be carried out," the President promised. Then, referring to the Vietnamese, he pledged: "As far as I can, within the law, I'm going to do all I can to help those people . . ."

But it was too late; Martin had waited too long. He was unable to process all the Vietnamese who clamored to escape. The State Department, for example, wanted to cable Saigon a list of intellectuals who were vulnerable to Communist retaliation and should be rescued.

But Martin, incredibly, refused even to accept the list. He informed the State Department icily that the embassy was making the decisions and had matters in hand.

Meanwhile, on April 21, the Vietnamese who thronged outside the embassy to save their families were greeted with this poignant notice: "PETITIONS FOR RELATIVES. Due to the press of business, we have temporarily suspended acceptance of petitions for parents, brothers and sisters. DO NOT WAIT IN LINE IF YOU ARE HERE FOR THIS PURPOSE. We hope to be able to accept petitions for parents, brothers and sisters in the near future."

Next day

The next day, according to White House minutes, Kissinger reported that it was "not realistic to count on the release of large numbers of South Vietnamese."

There was little more President Ford could do except joke about the crisis. The confidential minutes quote him as telling about one man who "showed up with four wives."

"Which one do you want out?" he was asked. His quick response, said the President, was: "I want the youngest one."

There was nothing funny, however, about the scramble by desperate Vietnamese to get their loved ones on the exit petitions. The petitions provided spaces for the names of relatives. Refugees have sworn to us that U.S. embassy employees sold the spaces like carnival barkers.

This profiteering in human distress was done by the Vietnamese employees, seldom by the American staff members, according to the refugees.

Reconciliation?

Jeffrey Hart

In the wake of Vietnam, President Gerald Ford says he wants Americans to "close ranks, avoid recriminations . . . look ahead to the many new goals we share and work together on the great tasks that remain to be accomplished."

That is a sweet thought, appropriate to a red-white-and-blue-draped platform on a sunny Fourth of July afternoon, but it certainly does not have much to do with the actualities of American life in 1975. The truth is that we are divided on a whole range of issues, some of them profound, and there is small likelihood that we are soon going to close ranks in some kind of era of good feeling.

What happened during the 1960s was that the revolutionary thrust which has split Europe since the 19th century began to make itself felt here.

Many people, of course, came to oppose the Vietnam war on practical grounds, concluding that it was unwinnable, but many, also, from Academy Award-winner Bert Schneider through the obscure radical clique on your local campus supported the Communist side.

I myself am acquainted with many individuals on the college campus who worked as tirelessly as General Giap himself for a Communist triumph. The fact that they have won this particular victory does not mean that they are going to go into ideological retirement. There is no doubt whatsoever that we are soon going to be hearing about the corrupt, repressive governments in Thailand, South Korea, the Philippines, Indonesia, and, no doubt eventually, Japan, Australia, and you name it. It is remarkable with what consistency a government is found to be corrupt and repressive when it becomes the focus of Communist attentions.

Deep division

Reconciliation? No consensus exists regarding America's role in the world, or about the meaning and value of Western civilization, or about what kind of society it is desirable to have. We are deeply divided, too, on a whole range of issues concerning morality and cultural style.

As ever, we have a strong undercurrent of "nuts to the foreigner" isolationism that has been energized by the Vietnam debacle, but we also now have something rather more ominous. A substantial segment of opinion regards America as a violent predator on the world scene, an over-consuming neo-imperialist poluler. This segment of opinion regards America with puritanical scorn and applauds every American setback, especially those at the

One refugee's story is typical of the several we have heard. He asked us not to use his name, because he is afraid of the consequences. But he alleges that he had to pay $3,000, two-thirds of it in gold, just to be introduced to someone who could place him and his family on an exit petition. Then it cost him another $3,000 to be listed.

He was told to wait for a call. It came at 3 a.m. on April 27. He was instructed to have his family at the airport by 5 a.m. Yet the curfew didn't end until 7 a.m. Anyone appearing on the streets earlier could be shot on sight.

He bundled his family aboard a 7 a.m. bus for the airport, where he was told he had missed his flight and would have to return to the end of the line. It took some frantic arguing and appealing for him to get his family aboard a later flight. Since the $6,000 bribe money had wiped out their entire life's savings, they arrived in the United States penniless.

At a secret White House meeting on April 29, Kissinger reported that of the 175,000 Vietnamese whom the President had hoped to rescue, the paperwork had been completed for 130,000 but that only 45,000 made it.

It is clear from the available documents that the man who is chiefly to blame, as we have reported in previous columns, is Graham Martin.

hands of Third World nations.

At loggerheads with such a view are those who reply that Americans consume because they also produce, that with one per cent of the world's farm population we produce 20 per cent of its food; and that if we "consume" the world's raw materials, we re-export them as technology. If America disappeared tomorrow, the standard of living in the Third World would surely decline precipitously.

Again, a substantial body of opinion in this country favors some variant of the socialist model of society, Scandinavian, Marxist, or whatever. This is a minority preference, but it is increasingly public and articulate. En route to that goal, this body of opinion favors ever increasing taxation and absorption of resources by the public sector.

Others, still certainly a majority, look upon such a course as the road to serfdom and wish to mount an immediate attack on the burgeoning Federal bureaucracy.

Again, a substantial and influential body of opinion desires to achieve equality of condition, economic and social. The more knowledgeable recognize that this will require coercion of one kind or another. Accordingly, they advocate redistribution of wealth and income, quotas in jobs and education, busing, and so on. Off down the road, this position probably entails state-supervised education and conditioning from a very early age, and, of course, the abolition of private schools.

Opposed to all this are those — again certainly a majority — who advocate not exactly equality of opportunity — which as a practical matter is not attainable — but what might be called "a decent break," or "a fair chance."

Cultural and moral issues

And morally and culturally we have a seismic split on issues such as abortion, euthanasia, eugenics, experiments with fetuses — the entire range of issues involving "modern" versus "traditional" ethics.

As the political and moral revolution throughout the world steps up the attack, these divisions in America are bound to become sharper and deeper.

Reconciliation? President Ford is whistling in the dark. The best we can hope for is that those on the near side of the divide will become more conscious of what is at stake, and consolidate their forces.

Social Security taxes fair to lower income workers?

Sylvia Porter

(Fourth in a series of five columns)

When Social Security taxes were first deducted from workers' pay back in 1937, the tax rate was 1 per cent matched by 1 per cent from the employer. On schedule was a rise to 3 per cent each by 1949, considered more than adequate to finance the program well into the future. The maximum earnings base was $3,000, so the maximum any worker paid was $30 and most paid less.

The reasoning of the law's original framers was that those with more than $3,000 a year would have sufficient excess income to provide a supplementary retirement cushion for themselves. Social Security's protection floor was not to be raised to replace earnings at a level above $3,000 a year.

The benefits were to range from $15 to $84 a month, depending on the worker's average earnings, and were to be payable only to the retired worker himself. No benefits were to go to his dependent wife, nor his widow and children if he died (except for a return of his contributions). There were no disability benefits if he became incapacitated for work, and of course no Medicare.

Today, the SS contribution rate is 5.85 per cent each on employee and employer and the upper limit on earnings subject to the tax and creditable toward benefits is $14,100.

Today, about 15 per cent of all workers have earnings above this maximum earnings base against 3 per cent above the maximum in 1937.

Today, benefits for an individual worker now on the retirement rolls range from a minimum $93.80 to $316 — while benefits for a worker retiring in the future with average earnings of $14,100 will amount to $484 a month. For families now on the benefit rolls, payments range from $140.80 to $574 per month and can be as high as $847 for those coming on the rolls a few years from now.

The original congressional intent to exclude upper earnings from the SS tax and from the computation of benefits has backfired. For example, the head of a family with earnings of only $5,000 a year now pays nearly $300 in Social Security taxes, but only about $100 in income taxes. But the person earning as much as $1,000,000 a year escapes paying Social Security taxes on all but the first $14,100 of his earnings.

If Social Security taxes were progressive — like the income tax — the millionaire would pay a share according to his income and the low income worker would pay according to his.

The charge (with which I have openly and do openly sympathize) is that the SS tax structure is appallingly regressive — and our fight has become much more heated recently because inflation has hit so viciously at the lower income brackets.

Week's series

But this week's series is designed to be utterly objective. Thus, I must report that the Social Security "white paper," signed by a bipartisan group of eight former Health, Education and Welfare secretaries and Social Security commissioners, strongly disagrees with this argument.

The benefit formula, says the white paper, is so designed as to give a larger return for each dollar of contributions to the low-income worker than the higher-paid worker. The net impact is to transfer some income from the more affluent to the less affluent. The paper continues:

"It is legitimate to argue that the system ought to be made more progressive than it is, as for instance by the introduction of a government contribution derived from general revenues, but it is not legitimate to argue, by disregarding the benefit payments that the system as now structured is regressive."

What's more, the experts declare, while an eventual government contribution to pay part of the cost of the SS system makes sense, the main support of the program should come from contributions of workers and their employers. If the principle of contributions is abandoned, a system financed out of general revenues would almost inevitably lead to a means test, so that you would not receive benefits until after you had become impoverished.

Without the tie between benefits and previous contributions, what would be the basis for paying those above the poverty line? Instead of a self-help program which you and I can use as a base on which to build toward family security, we easily might find Social Security turned into a welfare or negative income tax program designed to help only the very poor.

One solution might be along the lines of the one-shot tax credit in the 1975 tax law to help low-income workers with children offset their SS taxes, suggests former SS commissioner Robert M. Ball.

Letters to the editor

Editor, The Record:

I am a 13 year old 8th grade student at the Stroudsburg Middle School. I would like to express my opinion on racial discrimination and segregation by way of a poem I have written and through the ideas and facts I have stated below.

The Purple Pumpkin

I am a purple pumpkin,
I'm big and fat and round,
I'm different from the others,
And I never make a sound.
Because difference doesn't matter,
Color, size, or race,
As long as there is love within,
And a smile upon my face.

Segregation is the physical separation or isolation of races by law or custom. I feel this is entirely wrong. I have a brother who is half black and half white. I don't feel any different about him than about my other brother who is completely white. I love them both.

I know some people who are very prejudiced. I don't listen to them, because I think they're wrong. Some people say it's not their fault that they think that way. I think that if you are a true Christian you will do what God wants us to do, love everyone.

Color is only skin deep. Why do people sit out in the sun to get a tan if they think dark skin is so terrible? My brother has dark skin and I'd much rather have his color skin than look so pale all the time. Just because someone has different colored eyes or hair doesn't make him any better or any worse. So I don't see why there is so much fuss about skin color.

President Lincoln stated in the Gettysburg Address, "All men are created equal." This is the way they should be treated!

Good editorial

Editor, The Record:

Congratulations on your editorial concerning the plight of ESSC and the other state colleges.

I believe that it is especially important to inform the citizens of the Commonwealth, that the intent of certain influential people is to dismantle or severely reduce the quality of public higher education.

If these influential people succeed in their plan, the consequences are clear: It shall be nearly impossible for children of low and middle class families to obtain a quality college education in the Commonwealth.

The intent is to de-educate the masses of citizens and to re-establish the elitist belief that higher education ought to be available only to the privileged few.

Rizzo, Flaherty can deal in power

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Frank Rizzo and Pete Flaherty, the mayors of Pennsylvania's two biggest cities, became political powers Tuesday thanks to voters who backed their candidates against the Democratic organization.

It was a stunning personal victory for Rizzo, a former police commissioner considered a political 'has been' two years ago. He defeated state Sen. Louis Hill, the organization-backed candidate, by 32,000 votes in a race for the Democratic nomination for mayor of Philadelphia.

Pittsburgh Mayor Pete Flaherty, who last year lost his bid for the U.S. Senate, fielded his own slate of candidates in the Allegheny County Democratic Primary.

The big winner was the mayor's brother, Jim, who upset incumbent County Commissioner Leonard Staisey. Former Police Superintendent Robert Colville, another Flaherty-backed candidate, defeated incumbent District Attorney John Hickton in the race for the Democratic nomination.

Gov. Milton J. Shapp said Wednesday he was surprised by

Rizzo expected to enter politics on national level

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Mayor Frank L. Rizzo, considered a political washout two years ago, has smashed the city's Democratic machine in a primary election and observers believe he will move to field delegates in the party's national convention next year.

Rizzo, dumped by the city's Democratic leadership after a bitter feud with city Committee Chairman Peter J. Camiel, easily defeated the party-backed state Sen. Louis Hill by 32,000 votes Tuesday and ushered in nearly his entire slate of candidates for other city offices.

"I am grateful to so many people," Rizzo told supporters. "The people of this city showed the machine politicians that a man who works for the people can be re-elected."

Rizzo, formerly a nationally known police commissioner, will face former city councilman Thomas M. Foglietta, who had only token opposition in the Republican primary. But the Democrats have not lost a mayoral election since 1947.

The results led some Democratic party bosses to believe Rizzo has created his own political machine.

"I would imagine the mayor has the strength to field delegates to the national convention," said Henry Cianfrani, a state senator and Rizzo supporter. "I think he will get involved because it puts him in a position to have a say in the Pennsylvania delegation."

But Rizzo, once mentioned as a possible gubernatorial candidate, would have to work quickly to solidify the state party.

There is little doubt Rizzo will try to oust Camiel, but Camiel intends to make a fight of it.

"My political career is not ended unless I decide it is," Camiel said. "I'll continue to be politically active the rest of my life."

Philadelphia gave Rizzo 178,853 votes to Hill's 146,847. Many Rizzo-backed candidates also won the Democratic nominations for city council and county row offices.

Pennsylvania voters Tuesday also overwhelmingly approved a resolution changing the Constitution to plug a loophole that led to abuses in the process used by the state Senate to confirm gubernatorial appointments to key state jobs.

With nearly 80 per cent of the vote counted, there were 446,357 votes for the change and only 98,035 against it.

In another statewide race, Judge Edmund Spaeth of Philadelphia easily won the Democratic nomination for Superior Court, while Pittsburgh Judge Silvestri Silvestri won the Republican nomination. Spaeth, appointed to Superior Court two years ago by Shapp, will face Silvestri, an Allegheny County Common Pleas judge, in November in the race for a 10-year term on the state appeals court.

The latest unofficial returns gave Spaeth 252,498 votes over Silvestri's 210,758, while Pittsburgh Judge John P. Hester got 211,758 in the race for the Democratic nomination.

In the Republican balloting, Silvestri defeated Spaeth 104,255 to 117,311, while Hester ran a poor third with 97,875. Since the three candidates appeared on the Primary ballots of both parties, each had a chance to win both nominations and run uncontested in November.

In Allegheny County, Jim Flaherty defeated Staisey 114,190 to 111,074, according to the final official returns. Incumbent Commissioner Thomas J. Foerster was the top vote-getter among Democrats with 114,738.

Alex Jaffurs, former Liquor Control Board counsel and Flaherty's running mate, finished fourth with 90,930 votes.

Post nearly 50 per cent gain

Coal prices skyrocket

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Stable coal production coupled with increasing demand sent prices up nearly 50 per cent for public utilities and other major coal consumers this year, federal government data shows.

The increased prices for utilities are usually passed automatically to consumers, which accounted for substantially higher electric bills this past winter.

Documents filed at the Securities and Exchange Commission indicate that coal prices will generate even higher electric bills this fall, if the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries raises oil prices.

The Island Creek Coal Co.,

the nation's third largest producer, said coal prices jumped 45 per cent to an average $33.28 per ton through April 30 compared with $22.92 for all of 1974. Island Creek prices averaged $11.58 per ton in 1973.

"Island Creek's selling prices were favorably affected during 1974 by significant increases in the prices of petroleum-based fuels and are expected to continue to be influenced by changes in the prices for alternate fuels," Island Creek's parent company Occidental Petroleum said in a financial statement filed with the SEC.

Reports were not available for other major coal companies, but data at the Federal Power Commission indicated that all pricing practices were generally the same.

Candidate won election, but he doesn't know that

ERIE, Pa. (UPI) — James Caruso, who won a landslide victory in Tuesday's Democratic primary for Fairview Township supervisor, doesn't know he won nor that his wife of three months is dead.

Caruso is in a semi-coma in an Atlanta, Ga., hospital with injuries suffered in a two-car crash April 26. His wife was killed in the accident.

The 30-year-old Caruso suffered severe multiple trauma in the accident that left him with a broken jaw, other head injuries and lung contusions.

"We still don't know if he's able to understand us or not," the head of the intensive care unit at Atlanta's Northside Hospital said Wednesday.

Handling high blood pressure

My husband has high blood pressure. Neither his doctor nor I can get him to continue with his medicine for any length of time. As soon as he thinks he feels better he stops. Don't you agree that this is a very dangerous thing to do?

Mrs. L.J. Ind.

Dear Mrs. J.:

I do, indeed, believe that this is a dangerous way to handle even mild hypertension, or high blood pressure.

Your husband is not alone in such carelessness. Millions of Americans with varying degrees of high blood pressure do themselves an enormous injustice by neglecting this condition.

An excellent study was released by Dr. H. Mitchell Perry of the Washington University School of Medicine. He said, "Controlling high blood pressure is not difficult. The problem is keeping patients on medication."

Dr. Perry estimated that not more than one out of eight people with high blood pressure is being adequately and consistently treated.

Many people, like your husband, fail to understand the importance of constant treatment over a long period of time. Those who have no symptoms must be urged to continue their medication to prevent heart attacks and strokes.

Untreated high blood pressure, when added to high cholesterol levels in the blood and smoking, definitely increases the possibility of a heart attack or a stroke.

It has been the experience of most doctors that when their patients thoroughly understand their condition they are most likely to continue medication and to cooperate with their physician.

Hypertension, in most instances, is controllable. Only by prolonged control with medication, diet and loss of weight can this disease of modern civilization be kept in check.

What kind of metal is used to replace joints in the knee and hip?

Mr. T.T., N.J.

Scientists working on the problem of prosthetic appliances have always thought that a metal that does not cause foreign body reaction is essential. Only in this way can the body be kept from rejecting metallic implants.

The most commonly used metal is known as "vitalium." This is a mixture of chromium, cobalt and molybdenum.

There is a constant search for variations of this metal to insure even greater strength and durability.

Does a person who has had astigmatism for a long time have a greater tendency to develop cataracts or glaucoma?

Mrs. J.M., Ohio

Dear Mrs. M.: There does not seem to be any relationship between astigmatism and the onset of other eye conditions.

When astigmatism is recognized early and when proper corrective lenses are used and eye exercises followed, astigmatism can be markedly modified.

Field trips vital experience

By JUDITH GELBER

Field trips are a very important part of the educational experience, and all schools should provide as many opportunities as possible for their students to leave their home environment.

When money is as difficult to come by as it is now, school officials may hesitate to budget for what may appear as an unnecessary expense. It may seem foolish to delay ordering needed textbooks, for example, but to put money aside for trips to places of historical interest or to cultural events.

But giving young children a chance to discover the wide world that exists beyond their own little communities, even in the cities, is what education is about. No textbook, film, school production, or class discussion can substitute long for direct experience.

And perhaps more important than the visit to an actual battlefield or national monument is the wider experience of coming in contact with people, places and situations never encountered before. Even the simple act of going into a strange restaurant creates excitement for young people accustomed to a limited choice of all-too-familiar eating places near home grounds where the waitress may be a next-door neighbor.

The bus trip itself that takes the youngsters from the familiar to the unknown also is often a chance for goggle-eyed wonderment. The city child who is constantly walled in by tall buildings, crowds of people, rushing traffic — and smothered by polluted air as well — will shriek with amazement at the sight of cows grazing on a hill. Imagine! Real cows!

The rural child, to whom cows, farms and lush, unpopulated countryside are an everyday occurrence will be speechless with awe and wonder as his bus, entwined in undreamed-of traffic, passes under glass-walled towers that stretch endlessly towards the sky. And is it possible that a single apartment complex houses more people than live in his entire town?

Field trips also test the ability of young people to interact with unfamiliar adults. For example, a local merchant may make allowances for rude behavior because he knows a child's parents and feels free to tattle. But the person behind a souvenir counter in a strange place won't tolerate pushing, shoving, careless handling of merchandise, and so on. A child therefore learns the importance of behaving according to socially acceptable standards.

There are any number of important lessons a child learns when he leaves familiar territory, even if it is only for a few hours. Adults recognize the need for a change of scenery every now and then. And we must also recognize the need of young people to get away from the monotony of their daily routine.

More important, we must provide the mental and emotional stimulation that comes from engaging our senses in the unknown.

Dairy products cheaper substitutes

Chicken, beef barbecue bargains

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

Shoppers looking for alternates to high-priced meat and poultry should keep an eye on dairy products. They are the only foods expected to be lower in price soon, but, sorry to say, not in time for Memorial Day weekend.

Specials may be offered in cheese, butter and dry milk in coming weeks. The dairy outlook is good because a lot of fluid whole milk is diverted into manufactured products during the peak milk production months of May and June, according to consumer education specialists for the Cornell University Cooperative Extension Service.

However, such decreases were not yet reflected in UPI's weekly survey of basic food prices. This week's low for a 12-ounce package of sliced American cheese was 72 cents, 23 cents above the base price in Phoenix two months ago. Honolulu's high of $1.29 was up four cents from the base price two months earlier. Twenty cities reported it at 99 cents and up.

Although meat and poultry prices are starting upward, whole broiler-fryer chickens and chuck steak still were cheap enough in some cities this week to be a good choice for Memorial Day cookouts.

The low of 45 cents a pound for whole broiler-fryers reported in Washington, D.C., and Los Angeles this week matched the low in Birmingham, Ala., two months earlier. The high of 79 cents in Honolulu and Portland, Ore., was 10 cents lower than the high in Pittsburgh for the base week of March 19.

Some stores were still offering chuck steaks for 59 to 69 cents a pound, but the cost of ground chuck for hamburgers was rising.

The low of 69 cents for a pound of ground chuck in Los Angeles was up 10 cents from its low two months ago in Los Angeles and San Diego. New York's high of $1.59 a pound was up 40 cents from the base price.

Phoenix's low of 79 cents for a pound of butter was 16 cents above that reported in Detroit and Pittsburgh two months earlier.

Egg prices during the next few months are expected to rise, as production declines. But deviled eggs for cookouts and picnics still are a good menu choice in many cities. This week's low of 54 cents for a dozen Grade A large eggs in Los Angeles was a nickel less than the base price of 59 cents, in Jacksonville, Fla. They were only 55 cents in Detroit and San Diego. The high of 85 cents in Hartford and Honolulu was 18 cents below the base price in Honolulu in March.

Meantime, the extension service said beef cattle prices in the Midwest have risen about 25 per cent in the past few weeks. Some reached their highest levels since mid-1973. It said retail prices for some cuts have risen considerably, and may go higher.

The outlook isn't much better for pork and poultry. Spring pig production is down 20 per cent, broiler marketings for June are expected to be about five per cent lower than last year. Because demand generally increases during warm weather, prices usually rise, too.

As more states move into the canning and preserving season, retail sugar prices continued to decline. A 5-pound bag was under $2 in 27 cities, compared with $2.07 to $2.09 in 21 cities just two months earlier. The low of $1.37 in Phoenix and Birmingham, Ala., was 38 cents below the base price in Cincinnati; the high of $1.99 in Atlanta, Hartford and New York City was $1 less than Atlanta's base price.

DAR branch gives students 'Good Citizen' awards

STROUDSBURG — The Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR), Jacob Stroud Chapter, honored six high school students with good citizen awards at the group's closing luncheon of the year May 19 at the Penn Stroud Hilton Inn.

The chapter also heard an address on the Vietnam situation by John Brownlee, a retired U.S. Navy captain.

Honored by the DAR with Good Citizen pins and certificates were: Kathy Wilson, East Stroudsburg High School; Paula Horvath, Pocono Central Catholic; Frederica Kaltenthaler, Pocono Mountain; Joan Resh, Notre Dame; Judy Dorschner, Pleasant Valley; and Pamela Keller, Stroudsburg.

All those honored are seniors at their respective high schools. They were chosen by the faculty of the schools to receive the award. The award is an annual presentation.

Brownlee emphasized to the DAR that the country should not feel that its troops died in vain in Vietnam. The country should instead have learned some of the lessons of the Communist threat, he said.

Brownlee, a 25-year veteran of Navy Intelligence, explained that the means of protection in this country has changed from the time of the Revolution. He quoted George Washington's principle that "to be prepared for war is to have peace."

Regent of the chapter Mrs.

Frank DeRosa gave a report of the chapter's accomplishments during the club year.

Mrs. DeRosa urged members to continue saving commemorative stamps and to make lightweight washable material lap robes for the veterans hospitals.

The regent suggested that members write to television stations and theatres to protest undesirable movies showing violent murder and lewdness.

She explained that the DAR is concerned with what young people read and see in the media.

Mrs. Homer Heller reported that the chapter has almost reached the financial goal set for the chapter's bicentennial project of placing a new tombstone on the grave of Jacob Stroud. A dedication date will be publicized.

Mrs. Heller and Mrs. Detleff Hansen chaired the luncheon.

Sciota bicen groups plan market, social

SCIOTA — A flea market will be held Friday through Sunday at Twin Willows, Sciota, sponsored by the Downtown Sciota Liberty Belles. Craft items, antiques and other articles will be featured.

An auction will be held simultaneously by the Downtown Sciota Minutemen. A television set and an assortment of other items will be for sale.

Anyone interested in obtaining a table at the market should contact Pat McAllister at 992-7212.

The two groups will sponsor an old-fashioned box lunch social beginning at noon June 8 at the Cherry Valley Rod and Gun Club, Hamilton Square. The social will be open to the public at the cost of $1 per car.

Centennial dress is requested.

A demonstration of black powder shooting will take place at 1 p.m. to be followed by games and contests for children and adults. The final contest of the day will be a log-splitting contest; each participant should bring his own ax.

Lunches will be auctioned off at 3 p.m. Square dancing, a cake walk and music will also be available.

The Liberty Belles are gathering material about the history of the area in order to publish a booklet called "Sciota Remembered." Anyone with historic information should call 992-9134.

The Liberty Belles will be next June 3 at the Clearview Inn. Election of officers will be held.

Three plays added

Pocono Playhouse filling calendar

MOUNTAINHOME — A new Theatre Guild production, a comedy starring Van Johnson and what is billed as "the gayest musical of the century" have been lined up for the second, third and fourth shows of the 29th season of the Rowena Stevens Pocono Playhouse, manager Jack Lovett has announced.

"The Culture Caper," by Jerome Chodorov, a new Broadway-bound Theatre Guild offering will play July 8 to 12. Gabriel Dell is being signed to play the lead role of a famous American novelist. The Guild's negotiations are still under way for a star to play the beautiful Slavic poetess in this play which blends intrigue, romance and comedy.

From July 15 to 19, Van Johnson, international film and stage star, will be appearing in

"Send Me No Flowers," by Norman Barasch and Carroll Moore, in which a nice, robust hypochondriac jumps to the wrong conclusion with uproarious after-effects.

The mid-season two-week slot, July 22 through August 2, will feature a new production of Sandy Wilson's musical comedy, "The Boy Friend," which captures the exuberant merriment of the Roaring Twenties. The show, which was successfully revived on Broadway two seasons ago, will star Anne Russell, backed up by a cast of singers and dancers of the Broadway stage.

The cast of 15 in this musical is being directed by Forrest Carter, who has staged more than 20 productions of "The Boy Friend" from coast to coast.

As announced earlier, Emmy Award-winner Pat Carroll, a well-known television comedienne, will star in the opening show of the season, "Something's Afoot." This family entertainment will be in Mountainhome for two weeks, June 24 through July 5.

"The balance of the season, which will run through August 30, is about to be firmed up," manager Lovett said, "and from present indications, we believe our audiences will be delighted with the stars and plays being added to the schedule, an announcement of which will be made as soon as contracts have been signed, probably next week."

The Playhouse box office in Mountainhome (and its agencies in Scranton and Honesdale) will open on Monday, June 2.

In hospital

ALLENTOWN — Paula Pierson, East Stroudsburg R.D. 2, is a patient in the Allentown-Sacred Heart Medical Center, Cedar Crest Boulevard, Allentown.

Law women's club topic

POCONO PINES — The members of the Pocono Mountains Women's Club got a taste of the law at their May 19 meeting when Gerry Hanna, an associate of Daniel C. Higgins' law practice, spoke on the general aspects of law.

Hanna outlined the six basic categories of a general law practice and opened the meeting to questions.

Club members inquired chiefly about wills and child custody. They asked procedures for appointing guardians in a will.

Hanna emphasized that while parent's wishes are considered by the court in deciding custody after the parents' death, their naming of guardians does not have to be honored by the court.

The public affairs committee reported that all petitions regarding telephone service in the 646 exchange area have been presented to Commonwealth Telephone Co. Petitions carried approximately 1,300 signatures.

The committee also presented a $70 check to the Pocono Pines Boy Scout troop.

Wear a pioneer bonnet

Celebrate our country's heritage in fine do-it-yourself style.

By PHYLLIS FIAROTTA

Our Bicentennial is making us more aware of what we call "Americana" and a pioneer bonnet, whether calico or not, is a welcome gift for gardeners or beach-lovers. Make it in plastic for those who love to be out in the rain.

1. To make patterns for the bonnet, enlarge the grid on a sheet of paper so that one square equals 1 1/2 inches.

If you don't know how to enlarge patterns on a grid, send your requests for grid information along with a self-addressed, stamped business-size envelope to The Leisure Craftsman in care of The Pocono Record. Note: The grid information does not include patterns. Draw the two shapes on the enlarged grid and then cut them out.

2. Trace one bonnet cap (Fig. 1) and two brims (Fig. 2) onto your fabric. Trace a third brim on stiff interfacing.

3. Place the two fabric brim shapes together, right sides facing. Interfacing goes on top of the two brims.

4. Sew the three brim shapes together around the outer curve with a 1/4-inch seam.

5. Baste around the curve of the cap between the points marked X.

6. Pull basting thread to gather the cap to the same width as the inner brim.

7. Baste the gathered side of the cap to the interfacing and one brim shape, right sides facing.

8. When cap and brim sections are in place, sew securely together.

9. Turn the brim right side out.

10. Turn unsewed edge of the second brim section under 1/2 inch and sew it down under the cap.

11. Hem the extending bottom edge of the bonnet with a 1/4-inch hem.

12. Sew 8 inches of elastic tape to the base of the cap (see dotted line) gathering in all the fabric as you sew.

13. Sew a simple flower shape to each side of the brim.

14. Sew on ribbon ties or ties made from the same fabric as the bonnet.

Night cap

A night cap is a hemmed large circle of fabric with elastic tape sewed two to four inches in from the hemmed edge. To gauge the length, wrap the tape loosely around the forehead and back of the head.

Stretch the elastic tape as you ease in the fabric when sewing.

Doctor explodes a few myths of sports

LONDON (UPI) — Sports are just as much a rat race as business and many an athlete winds up on the psychiatrist's couch, Dr. J. A. Harrington told a meeting of the Institute of Sports Medicine.

Harrington told the experts he was going to explode a few myths, especially that sports contributes to a sound mind in a sound body.

"This may be true in a physical sense," he said, "but the assumption that sportsmen are psychologically the fittest is subject to many exceptions. You can have an athlete with a superbly fit body who is psychologically in a mess."

"There are," he said, "many facets of the present day sporting scene that are far from satisfactory from the emotional point of view."

Harrington said that with television and newspaper and magazine coverage, sport has replaced religion as a reason for existence and a way of life for many. He added:

"There is another myth that sportsmen can show the rest of the community the most healthy way in which to live their lives. Sporting protagonists suggest that greater investment of resources in sport would make us healthier, happier, make us live longer and would reduce delinquency, vandalism etc. This, I maintain, is a misconception ... the sportsman is more than an occasional visitor to the psychiatrist's couch."

Harrington said sporting activity is valuable insofar as it contributes to man's need to sublimate his aggression in a socially acceptable manner by transferring the competitive struggle to the sports field."

"But sport," he went on, "is now big business and like big business it has its own but less well known rat race. Even the casual weekend sportsman has become aware that he is under pressure. The advent of mass leisure has been accompanied by a passionate interest in sport which many now take far more seriously than anything else in their lives."

"Sport is certainly a strong rival to sex as a topic of conversation in clubs and pubs and a few young men will go so far as to admit that they think of little else."

"Pleasure and delight seem nowadays less prominent than frustration and anguish on the sports field. Victory is paramount and this is denied to the majority. The professional sportsman cannot afford to be a persistent loser but professional aspirations have entered the amateur field so today most people feel winning is the most important thing, and losing may be regarded as humiliating or even disastrous."

"If one wants to win, the opponent must be regarded as an enemy and not a friend until the game is over, but such an attitude often evokes guilt feelings ... unfortunately these paranoid activities are sometimes transferred to encounters off the sports field and this may explain why there are outbursts of hooliganism, between opposing players."

"Increasing age is as much an enemy of the athlete as it is of the beauty queen and the age of peak performance is constantly decreasing."

Unions make gains among public workers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unions won less than half their NLRB collective bargaining elections in the final half of 1974 but business and labor spokesmen agree the figures don't mean unions are passing from the scene.

The really rapid union gains, they say, are taking place among public workers not covered under the NLRB.

According to National Labor Relations Board statistics for the period July through December, unions won 48.4 per cent of the 4,653 elections entered and won representation over 37.5 per cent (129,253) of workers involved in the elections, slightly below the rate for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1974.

NLRB results, however, cover only part of the organized labor picture.

Alan Kistler, director of organization for the AFL-CIO, said the NLRB data is a valid "barometer for union organizing but no longer as complete a barometer as it was because there has been so much movement in the public employe field."

Asked if the economy influenced organizing, Kistler said there were mixed results. On the one hand "employers are very alert to exploit fears" but sometimes in a downturn there will be successes.

"There is a growing awareness among workers that they need something to protect them," Kistler said. He said he felt this awareness will be translated to support for collective bargaining.

"The number of calls I get about organizing campaigns are just as many," according to Brockwell Heylin, a labor relations attorney for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Heylin said the Northeast and the industrial Midwest in the United States already are heavily organized.

"Many of the calls I get these days are the companies in the Southwest and the South—Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Missouri, and Kentucky through Georgia."

"We're also worried about all the public employe strikes you see these days," Heylin said. "As a practical matter we don't think we can tolerate strikes by people who perform vital services."

Heylin said while the organizing effort does not let up, "the modern worker feels more individualistic than workers in the past."

Bank keeps Taiwan as member

MANILA (UPI) — China's political steamroller won't be enough to force Taiwan out of the Asian Development Bank in the near future, according to Shiro Inoue, the bank's Japanese president.

The ADB is an international finance institution owned by 41 member governments. It was formed to lend money and finance technical assistance to developing countries in Asia and the South Pacific.

The bank is one of the few major world organizations of which Taiwan is a member. The island state was expelled from the United Nations in 1971 and was replaced by China, which claims jurisdiction over Taiwan.

Pakistan, Nepal, India, and Sri Lanka have called for China's membership in the ADB, but China itself has not applied.

If it does so, it will almost certainly demand the exclusion of Taiwan.

"Nepal has consistently over the years upheld the view that there is only one China, and that is the People's Republic of China," said Nepalese Finance Minister Bhekh B. Thapa at a recent meeting of bank members in Manila. "Any move the bank can take to correct the present day distortion in our membership will add to its strength and make it a truly regional organization."

N.M. Perera, Sri Lanka's finance minister, said there may be some difficulties in allowing China to join.

"But they are not insurmountable, and certainly not beyond the capacity and the competence of the bank to solve. We can only enhance the influence and the prestige of the bank by the inclusion of a regional member as China."

Inoue said that for China to become an ADB member, it has to apply.

"Then its application will have to be approved by a two thirds

Shower of ideas for prospective bride sparked by versatile paper products

If you're looking for a different idea in bridal showers, take a hint from a versatile product we use for reading, writing, greeting, eating, and delighting our eyes: paper.

A paper shower not only gives you a colorful potential for decor, but a host of gift ideas the bride will find uncommonly helpful.

Shower with cards

Among the shower gifts suggested by American Greetings Corporation are things every homemaker uses but rarely stocks up in advance. For example, the bride who finds she has a supply of cards for most major occasions on hand will thank you each time she uses one.

The year-round card supply should include get-well cards, graduation cards, cards that can take almost any message, congratulatory cards that can be used for almost any event of note.

Of course you'll try to select cards that suit the bride's taste, and you'll find a tremendous selection to choose from in both the contemporary and traditional moods.

Another gift for year-round use are colorful wrappings appropriate to any occasion. Select solid papers or rolls with contrasting ribbons, matching tags and bows.

The gift package should contain rolls and sheets the bride can use for everything from birthday gifts to special occasion presents.

A third paper possibility is a set of party goods, including paper plates, napkins, table cloth, place cards, and even a centerpiece that will come in handy for one of the bride's first casual parties.

One of the most popular sets is American Greetings' Holly Hobbie collection, which features a series of wistful children in old-fashioned dress.

The Holly Hobbie figures also star on ceramic plates and other handsome accessories for the home, so the party the bride creates with paper could inspire a permanent collection.

Wall decor

You'll find nostalgic decoupage kits the bride with a steady hand can turn into lovely wall decorations. The decoupage kits also star the Holly Hobbie little people.

Another gift of paper that will help the bride through post-wedding niceties are packets of writing paper with distinctive designs she can immediately put to use for thank you notes.

THE ABC'S OF DIAMONDS BEGINS WITH THE LETTER

Before you select your diamond ring, know the "4C's" of diamond quality and value:

Color. From shades of yellow to finest white.

Clarity. The measurement of imperfections.

Cut. Determines the degree of brilliance.

Carat Weight. The measure of a diamond's size.

Every ArtCarved diamond is carefully selected and graded for superior color, clarity and cut. The carat weight of the diamond is permanently engraved on the inside of each ArtCarved ring, providing lasting value for your lasting love.

President Ford had great deal riding on Mayaguez

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nothing succeeds like success and that is the way it is with President Ford's handling of the Mayaguez incident.

Former President Richard M. Nixon used to say "if it comes out all right, it will have been right." Pragmatism at its best.

The seizure of the American merchant ship Mayaguez by the Cambodians gave Ford his first military challenge, and by all accounts was his toughest crisis since he took over the presidency Aug. 9.

He had a lot riding on him in terms of the outcome. But just as much was at stake in how much he was willing to put in the pot to win in a hurry.

In retrospect, it appears Ford was prepared to throw the nation's military might if necessary into a situation he felt was right. It is also clear that he and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger were not optimistic from the outset that a diplomatic solution was possible. They waited 60 hours but all the options they were considering pointed mainly to the use of force to recover the crew and the ship.

Ford's decision to send in the Marines was a tradition with American presidents in times of stress. He also kept the leaders of Congress informed, although not seeking their advice as he was about to give the final go ahead on the use of air strikes and Marines to accomplish his objective. The alerting of B52s was another step which has by now come to light.

By accusing the Cambodians of an "act of piracy" in the beginning he laid the legal ground work for the actions that followed.

In days, months, perhaps years to come there may be some Monday morning quarterbacking on whether there was a case of overkill and over reaction. Charles T. Miller, captain of the crew, said the air strikes against the mainland continued after the crew had been returned to the American destroyer Wilson.

White House press secretary Ron Nessen explained that the strikes were continued because Marines were still pinned down under hostile fire on Koh Tang, the island where the United States first thought the crew was being held.

Nessen has stated several times that in the White House view military pressure had been the prime instrument in forcing the release of the crew.

Miller agrees. The captain also said he tried to bargain with Cambodian authorities to bring about a halt in the bombing in exchange for release of the men.

Both Ford and Kissinger welcomed the fact that the incident and the American show of power reinforced their recent verbal statements that the United States would stand and fight in Asia if necessary to defend allies.

Kissinger said that the forceable recovery of the Mayaguez told the world "there are limits beyond which the United States cannot be pushed."

However, Kissinger added, "We are not going around looking for opportunities to prove our manhood." Nevertheless, in recent weeks senior American officials have stated forcefully that they believe the current period is a time of testing of the United States will to stand by its commitments.

As a result of the incident, Ford's popularity polls have gone up. He has been praised by foreign leaders for his for his use of military power in the aftermath of the Vietnam debacle. He has enhanced his prestige with the conservative wing of the Republican party and he is exuding a new confidence in himself as a national leader.

The test may come if another incident presents itself.

So far Ford believes the price has not been too high to pay in terms of casualties and he thinks that his action will forestall future adventurism against the United States.

Plenty of practical reasons

Changes on way in U.S.-Cuban relations

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

One way or another — whether by a form of "ping pong diplomacy" as proposed by Sen. George McGovern or for as basic a reason as lost trade opportunities — a change is on the way in U.S.-Cuban relations.

McGovern, the most recent among prominent Americans to visit the Cuba of Fidel Castro, said he had proposed that baseball and basketball be used to help break down hostility between the two nations.

Castro, he said, liked the idea.

So-called ping pong diplomacy helped ease U.S. relations with China.

A practical reason for bringing the United States' 14-year-old embargo against Cuba to an end lies in the matter of trade, particularly in a time of U.S. business recession.

Cuba's foreign trade in 1973 came to $2.6 billion, double that of 1968.

On May 9 this year, Britain became the most recent among a growing list of countries which have signed trade pacts with Cuba. The British deal opened the way to a trade boost of $240 million annually in both directions.

Mexican-Cuban trade already comes to $310 million.

Argentina is Cuba's leading trading partner in the Americas, topping the list at $500 million.

The State Department has authorized U.S.-owned firms abroad to sell to Cuba and is coming under increasing pressure from companies at home for similar permission. Such permission cannot be granted without congressional action.

The countries of the American hemisphere, including six members of the Organization of American States, have recognized Cuba and are doing business with her.

The United States, having led the OAS move in 1964 to cut diplomatic and economic ties with Cuba, now is willing to reconsider but is reluctant to take any step which could give it a "made in the U.S.A." label.

The strategy, therefore, is to await a meeting in Costa Rica next July at which a reform of the Rio de Janeiro treaty of 1964 is to be undertaken.

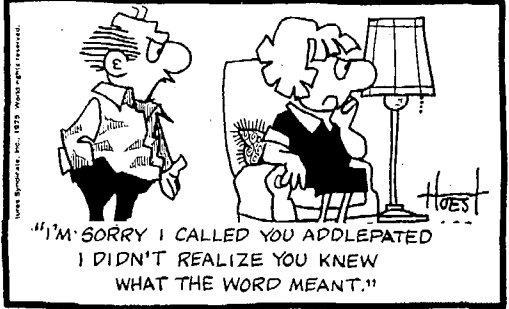

The Cuban sanctions were adopted under the treaty and require a two-thirds vote among the OAS members before they can be lifted.

The Costa Rica conference is expected to change the rules to permit the sanctions to be lifted by vote of a simple majority.

The Washington administration then will support passage of resolutions already before the U.S. senate lifting the United States' own embargo.

Encouraging to the United States was Castro's assertion during the McGovern visit that

Voice of Broadway

By JACK O'BRIAN

NEW YORK — What Price Stardom: here's how hot the Broadway smash "Same Time, Next Year" is: Goldie Hawn, in town for one night, cajoled producer Mort Gottlieb, ticket-scalpers, etc., her agent, every hotshot pal to get her tickets: she wound up going to the box-office at curtain time hoping someone might return tickets: one turned up — and Goldie saw the hit — from 'way back in the balcony.

Marine Col. Jack Brennan will replace Nixon's gopher Ron Ziegler within a month . . . Beautiful Josetta Capriotti, who runs Rizzoli's Italian culture shop on 5th Ave., won the Italiana Week contest for her most beautiful storefront decorations; the prize (we swear) — a week in Elmira, N.Y. . . . Eleanor Holm, bounced from the 1936 Olympics by Avery Brundage for having a guzzle of shipboard champagne with American sportswriters, heard about Brundage's death while lunching with Leah Ray Werblin at "21"; asked her reaction, the still-beautiful Ellie shrugged, "I wasn't ever mad at him — he turned me from a penniless amateur to $5,000 a week in one minute."

The Incomparable Hildegard is working with Catholic associates to hav missionary D. T. M. D. oley named a saint. "He is being considered by the Postulator of Causes in Rome for sainthood," Hildy told us. "Isn't this wonderful?" . . . United Airlines' Bicentennial gift to travel agent is a handsome cup inscribed "Celebrate a Proud Land Born 200 Years Ago — United Airlines." Turn it upside down and you learn the cup's origin: "Japan." . . . If the fine-boned handsome lady shopping in Gristede's at First Ave. and 59th St. looks like Greta Garbo, she is.

Steve Ortiz is at the Hawaii Kai, billed as "America's Fastest Rising Navajo Comic." "It's a slow rise: Steve's been there a year . . . Bobby Riggs works hard and profitably at being a male chauvinist boar but hardly is piggy about money: he took a three-room suite at the Sherry Netherlands; he's there alone; he says . . . Flash! Telly Savalas is not bald He shaved his pate to play Pontius Pilot in "The Greatest Story Ever Told" and liked it. He could grow shrubbery ear to ear but won't: "Every time I shave I shave all over — my head," he said.

Asked in London if she's nostalgic for the "good old days," Shelly Winters snarled "You're bleep damned right I am. I miss the glamor and romance." Here's only a small part of Shel's "romantic" Hollywood history: drowned by Montgomery Clift, run over with a car by James Mason and Alan Ladd, knifed by Robert Mitchum and strangled by Ronald Colman. Glamor and romance indeed! . . . Jimmie Walker was rolling over in his grave with thirst: at "The Fantasticks" 15th anniversary party Mayor Abe Beame didn't drink anything and wife Mary sipped a Tab.

Kentucky has made so many honorary colonels that upwardly mobile stars need something more to accept a stately honor, suh: Mike Douglas was made a Commanding General of the Honorary Order of Kentucky Colonels . . . Mike was there as star of the Ky. Derby dinner, his fee, $25,000 — which Mike donated to the Easter Seals Society . . . Doubleday's publicity for Gay Talese's not too soon-due book (maybe 1976) about commercialized sex states that Gay has "experienced everything there is to experience" about his subject; he's set already for more than a million in front . . . New York has everything, even a bank in a subway (Continental Ave. station of the IND in Queens) . . . The "Incomparable" sweepstakes dashes along: Hildegard's irked at Dietrich for stealing her billing (which Belle Baker used 50 years ago) and now there's a rock group, the Incomparables.

Freddie Finklehoffe, who wrote "Brother Rat," "Meet Me in St. Louis" and other gold mimes, is at it again — writing an autobiography with and about twice-Kentucky Derby-winner and Hall of Famer Conn McCreary, one of the greatest jockeys of all winning time. Conn now works for the Calder Track in Pal., where he also broadcasts.

Ann Landers

Returned tip

Dear Ann Landers: I'm the wife who took the $5 bill from under the plate. My husband left it as a tip for the waitress. I needed that $5 to get some fabric out of will-call. I always thought waitresses should be paid a living wage. Lord knows people who eat out spend enough for food these days without having to come up with a big tip.

After reading all those letters in your column from waitresses who said they depend on tips to live, I talked it over with my daughter. She shed a few tears together and decided to save up $5 and give it to that waitress.

I personally took the five over myself, apologized to the girl and handed her the money. She took it, looked me straight in the eye and said, "You're unreal." Then she walked away without another word. It was humiliating that she expressed no appreciation whatever.

What do you think of this, Ann Landers?

—Foolish Samaritan

Dear Samaritan: I do not agree that the waitress showed no appreciation whatever. Her comment, "You're unreal," may have been the finest compliment you've ever received. What she was saying is this: "You are so marvelous, I can't believe you exist."

The greatest human problem in today's world is the failure

ATTENTION: (Q.) I have fallen in love with a sophomore guy. He is a nice guy but will not talk to me when he is around other guys. What should I do to get his attention? —

In Love in Indiana

(A.) Do not try to get the boy to leave his male friends to talk to you. This would embarrass him and very likely might cause him to be less friendly toward you.

Do not make any demands upon him until you and he know each other a lot better. But DO be friendly whenever you see him, whether he is alone or with others. And arrange to see him and be seen by him frequently.

This will tell him that you would like to see more of him. Maybe he will take your hint.

ALONE: (Comment) You tell people it is a mistake for a girl and a boy to be together in a house when none of their parents are there. I disagree with you.

My boy friend visits me often when only we two are in my house. My parents, who both work and have to be away a lot, encourage him to visit me so I won't be alone so much of the time.

We don't have sex, and I think that teen-agers who do so in such a situation must be pretty irresponsible. —

Responsible in Texas

(A.) Congratulations to you and your boy friend for your mutual respect and self-control.

Congratulations to your parents for realizing you can be trusted.

The advice I give here fits MOST boys and girls. It does not always fit all of them. There are exceptions to most good rules. Your arrangement appears not to be a mistake for you.

But my mail still tells me that it is dangerous for most boys and girls to be together in an otherwise empty house.

—Ashamed of Myself In Missouri

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from "Embarrassed Friend" asking for help for someone who uses terrible grammar. My problem is just the opposite. I'm the one who needs help.

I am a 16-year-old nut who has a thing about grammar. When someone mispronounces a word or makes a grammatical mistake in my presence, I have an uncontrollable compulsion to correct them. It kills me when someone says, "Between you and I," or "ad-very-TYZ-ment."

I interrupt people and set them straight, friend and foe alike — relatives and elders included. I know I should keep my mouth shut. My own mother is starting to call me "Miss Know-It-All." What can I do?

us. Try clamping your teeth shut and making the correction silently. If that doesn't work, accept the fact that it's a sick habit and recognize it for what it is. And incidentally, ad-very-TYZ-ment is perfectly correct. Ad-VER-tis-ment is the second choice. (I had an uncontrollable compulsion to tell you that.)

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious — lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Lander's booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Soviets tap automobile export market

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Yuri Ledentsov is a topflight Soviet businessman in a capitalist world.

He wears wide lapel suits, wide striped ties, rather long sideburns, and can rattle off last quarter's profit and loss figures of Ford and General Motors without a second thought.

Ledentsov is the managing director of Matreco which sells Russian made cars, and says his parent company, Avtoex-port, will try to tap the American market.

With the big three U.S. auto makers in economic difficulty, Ledentsov believes a Soviet-made import just might make it.

His product is the Russian version of the Italian Fiat. The name on the Russian market is Zhiguli, but the car is marketed abroad under the name of Lada, except in Sweden where it is called Vaz, because in Swedish Lada means barn.

Ledentsov said in an interview that Avtoexport has no immediate plans to flood the American market, but "step by step we should be able to make a start. I don't know when, but we are thinking about it."

Fiat built the assembly plant for the cars in the Soviet Union and set the dies.

The only restriction on exports, according to Ledentsov, is that the Russian-built Fiats not be sold in Italy. In Sweden, Matreco has been running full-page advertisements in newspapers saying the Soviet-built car can undercut the Italian product by about 20 per cent on the basic price.

"It is difficult to give exact price comparisons between our model and the Italian model, though," Ledentsov said. "We are currently producing the Vaz 1200 and the Vaz 1500 which are comparable to the Fiat 124 and 125, but those Fiat models are not being produced anymore."

Another advantage, according to Ledentsov, is that the Lada or Vaz uses mostly parts that can be interchanged with Fiat parts.

Matreco has been selling the Fiat copy in Sweden since 1973

During the first year of sales in Sweden, only 381 Vaz units were sold. The figure rose to 787 last year and Ledentsov hopes to unload 3,000 Vaz cars on the Swedish market within three years.

"In other nations we are doing pretty well," Ledentsov said. "For instance, in Finland we sell about 12,000 cars a year and in the Benelux countries about 8,000 cars. In Norway we sold 1,500 last year and in Iceland one out of five cars is ours."

He said Middle East countries figure largely in export sales.

"In fact, one-third of all Zhiguli cars built are exported to other socialist countries and the west," he said. "Currently we market the car in about 50 countries and this year's total production is expected to be 660,000 units."

Ledentsov said all the cars are assembled in the Soviet Union, but some individual parts are made in Poland, Yugoslavia, East Germany, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia and Hungary.

Matreco handles other business in Sweden besides cars. It also is involved in export of electrical motors, mining equipment and drilling machines, wood products and boats. "On the whole, I would say we are making an over-all profit, despite the present loss in car sales," Ledentsov said.

Banks changing images to attract more customers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Banks, once the most conservative of businesses both in practice and decor, are trying a new, neighborhood design approach in an effort to attract more customers.

Going the way of low interest rates and suits with vests are the high teller counters, stand-up check writing tables, the traditional drab colors and marble mausoleum look.

An increasing number of banks and savings and loan companies are going in for wide open spaces, low teller counters, comfortable sit-down check writing tables and individualized decor.

Imagine a beachfront savings and loan office with a nautical motif complete with sails, spars and spoked wheels. There's one in Marina Del Rey, Calif.

Or a branch of Bank of America, the nation's largest and once one of the stodgiest, with a giant African mask and a mural depicting the black heritage — from the depths of Africa to an idealistic picture of the future of blacks. There's such a branch in the heart of Watts, scene of the 1965 riots.

In predominantly Chicano East Los Angeles, another Bank of America branch emphasizes the Mexican heritage and culture of the neighborhood residents.

Pacesetter in the move to a different look in banks and savings and loans institutions is Cannell and Chaffin Commercial Interiors, a nationwide firm which did more than half the 4,800 Bank of America branches in Southern California as well as hundreds of other banking offices, including Crocker Bank and Security Pacific National Bank.

"Times are changing," said Bruce Archibald, executive vice president of Cannell and Chaffin. "People's dress, people's mores, their ways of living are not the same as they were five or 10 years ago. We found by trying to identify a corporation's image with the area in which it wants to do business, the firm will do better and we will have a more successful project."

A strong link exists between the environment in a firm and the responses of the people it does business with, either as customers or employees, Archibald said.

"If you can create a pleasant environment, the hours people spend in the business will be better and more productive and the owners and managers obviously will be better off," he said.

Cannell and Chaffin pays close attention to the neighborhood when it sets out to design a new building or redesign an old one.

Most people, he said, tend to prefer the familiar, the recognizable. "A design firm has to have the ability to take any kind of an interior concept and do it tastefully and professionally, whether it is modern or Mexican or black."

The Afro bank in Watts was a direct outgrowth of the mid 1960's riots, he said.

"The officers of the bank finally decided they really weren't identifying with the area in which they wanted to do business. Originally they felt what was good for the main branch was good everywhere. They came around to the fact that just wasn't the case.

Auditor nominated

LONG POND — Nancy Meikle received 19 write-in votes in Tuesday's primary election, enough to have her name placed on the November ballot as a Democratic candidate for Tunkhannock Township auditor.

The 19 write-in votes, nine more than required for nomination, will enable the Democrat to oppose Harriet Coleman who received the Republican nomination.

On dean's list
UNIVERSITY PARK — Pamela B. Miller of Cresco was named to the dean's list for the winter term at Penn State.

BALANCE — Jeanne Marotta, 9, probably won't be able to repeat this trick, but she and other members of the Notre Dame gymnastic club will show off their talents at 7 p.m. Friday in the high school gymnasium. There will also be an art exhibit.

School board nominations 'confused' by crossfilings

STROUDSBURG — Crossfil-ing in this year's primary elec-tion has confused voters and virtually assured certain pri-mary winners of being elected to Monroe County school board in November.

For the candidate who cross-filed and won election in Tues-day's primary, the "chances are double of getting elected," said Monroe County Registrar Mrs. Cherry Rahn.

As a side effect, the system that started with judges a few years ago and worked its way down through district magis-trates to school board candi-dates has confused voters, she said.

Crossfiling allows a candi-date to appear on both Demo-cratic and Republican tickets in the elections. A school board candidate, for example, needs at least 10 signatures on a peti-tion to be placed on the Demo-cratic ticket.

If a Republican files a sepa-rate petition for the candidate, the contender is crossfiled and listed on both tickets, Mrs. Rahn explained.

Because all 12 candidates for positions on the Stroudsburg School Board crossfiled, only four will be listed on the No-vember ballot, although there will be six names to choose from.

On the Democratic ticket, the top three vote getters were incumbent John P. Lim, Joan C. Patterson and John F. DeVi-vo. On the Republican ticket, the top vote getters who now advance to the November elec-tion were Patterson, Lim and incumbent W. Edmund Ma-gann respectively.

Voters will choose three peo-ple from the four candidates to fill three vacancies on the school board.

Patterson gained the great-est number of votes by cross-filing, 1,341, but Lim trailed her by only five votes. If voters in November sustain the two candidates' leads, the choice will be between DeVivo and Magann. Total votes in the pri-mary show DeVivo ahead by a slight margin — 1,036 votes to Magann's 979.

The results from Porter Township in Pike County have changed the contest for posi-tions on the East Stroudsburg School Board slightly and will require a drawing to deter-mine who the third candidate on the November ballot in the Republican party will be.

Top vote getters on the Dem-ocratic side remain Neil O. An-derson, incumbent Martin K. Smith and John A. Clark, re-spectively. Anderson and Clark

STROUDSBURG — The Stroudsburg High School Band and Chorus will present a Pops Concert at 8 p.m. tonight in the high school auditorium.

The concert will include a medley of songs by The Beatles, such as "Yesterday," "Penny Lane" and "Michelle." The medley will be presented by the band, directed by Ralph S. Harrison, and a select chorus group, directed by Roger K. Butler.

All other selections will be performed by either the band or the chorus alone.

The band will play Henry Mancini's "Days of Wine and Roses," "TSOP" (The Sound of Philadelphia) and Edward J. Madden's "Rock Movement for Band." The band will also present "Black Magic Woman," "House of the Rising Sun" and a medley from the rock opera "Godspell."

The chorus will sing "Dear Father," the recent Helen Reddy tune, "You and Me Against the World," and "Brother Sun, Sister Moon." The theme from the current children's television show, "Sesame Street," "Time in a Bottle" and "Photographs and Memories" by the late song-writer Jim Croce will complete the chorus presentation.

Senior Pete Rinehart will ac-company the chorus on the piano and senior Steve Cassel will narrate the program.

The concert will be the last high school performance by a group of 32 senior band and chorus members, some of whom have represented the high school on a district level.

Rinehart has participated in district, regional chorus festi-vals and was selected for the all-eastern festival. Seniors Joan Frailey and David Cahn were also selected to sing in district chorus.

Ten senior band members have been selected for district band festivals over the past three years, among them Tom Becker, Joan Frailey, Jay Fu-sciardi, Jeff Possinger, Debbie Seip, John Frailey and Karen Huber.

Miss Huber and Bill Austell have also represented the high school at the regional band level.

The high school marching band will participate in the county Memorial Day parade at 10 a.m. Monday, May 26.

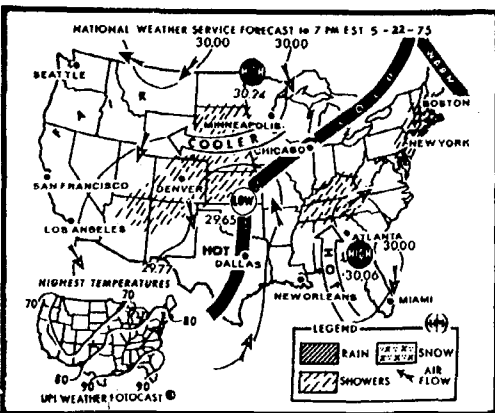

Council nomination

STROUDSBURG — Janet Rogers, a Democrat, received 16 write-in votes on the Repub-lican ticket in Tuesday's elec-tion which will enable her to oppose Democrat George Spring for the Stroudsburg councilman seat from the sec-ond ward.

Spring won the Democratic nomination but only polled eight write-in votes for the Re-publican spot on the November ballot.

'Tis better to have run and lost than . . .

By FLIP DeLUCA
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — When there are 11 candidates for county commissioner but only four nominations open, simple arithmetic dictates that seven of the candidates will suffer defeat.

Such was the case in Tuesday's primary election when five Republicans and six Democrats vied for commissioner nominations.

Although there were only four winners, Republicans Jesse D. Pierson and Mrs. Nancy B. Shukaitis and Democrats Stuart Pipher and Arlington Martin, most of the losers viewed their defeats philosophically the day after the election.

Incumbent commissioner William Quinn of Pocono Lake, who failed to gain one of two Republican nominations, said Wednesday it "remains to be seen" if he will continue to be active in politics.

Quinn said he is not bitter at his defeat and will support the Republican ticket in the November election.

He said there was a combination of things, including a couple of the issues, which caused him to lose the election, but said he preferred not to go into detail.

Paul E. Nauman of Cresco, who placed fourth on the Republican ticket, said running for political office hasn't changed him. "I'll go on being Paul," he said.

Nauman noted that he was pleased with his own showing (1,220 votes) and also pleased with the victory by Pierson and Mrs. Shukaitis.

"I didn't have the time to get to the people as much as I would have liked," Nauman said of his campaign. "I had to get around and get reacquainted. The problem that there were many new people cost me most of the votes."

Brendan V. Higgins of Delaware Water Gap, who managed about five per cent of the vote, said, "What we need is a new newspaper in this town and that's the beginning and end of my quote." Higgins refused to elaborate.

On the Democratic ticket, Douglas E. Williams Jr. of Saylorburg who finished third, said he intends to run again for commissioner four years from now.

"We had a victory of sorts and I'm not at all discouraged. I've only begun to fight," Williams said. "I'm taking the loss as a stepping stone for victory."

Williams, who polled 1,491 votes, said he doesn't intend to change drastically his campaign of "the people's candidate."

"If I had two more weeks it would have been a different outcome. Fourteen more days and I would have won," Williams predicted.

Howard Popkin of Stroudsburg said he still plans to be involved in government "one way or another," either in elected or appointed office.

Regarding Tuesday's election, Popkin said he hasn't had a chance to analyze his campaign but said if he ever should run for public office again, he would be sure to make some changes in his methods.

Popkin said he has no plans at present to endorse any of the candidates in the general election "but that's not to say I won't at a later time."

Unsuccessful candidate Raymond E. Davies Sr. of East Stroudsburg R.D. 4 said he would prefer waiting awhile before making any comment on the election or his future in politics.

A. John Dadds of Stroud Township said he does not plan to seek political office again and said he'd have to wait and see what the issues are before considering supporting any of the candidates.

Dadds said he spoke several times throughout the county but always seemed to end up talking to the same group of people which he termed "a little discouraging." He said he is sure the people of the county didn't take an interest in the election this year.

"I was considerably disappointed that the public was not interested in reforming county government under the Home Rule Charter," he said.

Board decision not definite

By JEFF WIDMER
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Parents concerned about plans to bus their children from Hamilton Township to the B.F. Morey Elementary School in Stroudsburg brought their protest to the Stroudsburg School Board Wednesday night, but board members assured the group the busing plan is not a final one.

The board also said it will meet with the Stroudsburg Borough Council to solve the problem of a dangerous intersection in front of the Morey School and announced its budget for 1975-76 will be discussed at a special meeting next Wednesday.

Commenting on a district proposal to bus students who now attend Hamilton Elementary School in Sciota to the Morey School to balance class sizes, Mrs. Sue Martin told the board if Hamilton parents wanted to send their children to a town school, they would have moved to town.

She said Hamilton students are in a different peer group and would have trouble adjusting to town students. She suggested the board move one teacher to Hamilton instead of an entire class to Morey.

Russell E. Treible, director of elementary schools, told Mrs. Martin plans to shift children are tentative now.

Pointing out a projected drop in first grade enrollment at Morey next year to 19 students and an overcrowded Hamilton first grade of about 32 students, Treible said a probable solution will be to move teachers and students.

Board member Donald M. Stone said he agreed with Mrs.

Martin's suggestion to move a teacher, but added some shifting of staff or students may be necessary.

Stating the taxpayers cannot afford teachers if classroom populations drop below 19 students, Stone commented, "What we are really trying to do is to use our rooms and use our labor force to the optimum."

He said the administration will have to wait until student populations are calculated in June before planning a shift of students.

In other business, the board announced it will meet with Stroudsburg Borough Council members to discuss a potential hazard at the intersection in front of the Morey School, created by redevelopment work in the area.

Board solicitor Samuel Newman pointed out a walk-do-not-walk light proposed for a spot in front of the school would allow children to cross West Main Street while traffic traveled on and off Dreher Avenue.

He recommended the meeting with the council to jointly persuade the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation to change the intersection to include a system of traffic lights that stops all traffic to allow school children to cross.

At the moment, West Main Street, widened for the Stoflet Street Neighborhood Development Project, is too wide for the Morey crossing guard to guide students across the road, Newman continued. A new guard may have to be hired, he said.

Newman, board members and district Superintendent Samuel O. Wells III again voiced opposition to a traffic light the Redevelopment Authority of Monroe County wants to put over the Morey School driveway. Newman said the light makes the driveway appear to be a through road, and said he asked PennDOT to place a "No Through Traffic" sign at the driveway's entrance.

In further business, the board will discuss its proposed budget for 1975-76 at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 28.

Ernest Wyckoff applauded for community leadership

By RON BOUCHARD
Pocono Record Editor

STROUDSBURG — "The Trinket Man" is how generations of children have known him.

To many of his old friends, he is "Papa".

But to the hundreds and more who met in testimony to his energy, dedication and humanitarianism at the Penn Stroud Wednesday, he is Ernest H. Wyckoff — as perfect an embodiment of "community leader" as you can find anywhere.

As modest and down-to-earth as only a man of considerable accomplishment can be, to himself he was, "grateful to you for turning out to honor me, but to tell you the truth, I'm not worth it."

Several speakers disputed that remark, including main speaker Judge Arlington W. Williams: "There is nothing more fitting that could happen. . . than that so many people should take the time to say 'Thank you' to such a good and wonderful gentleman."

To sum up Wyckoff's character and personality, said the judge, one phrase will do: "He loves children. I know no one in my lifetime has more grasped Jesus' command, 'Suffer the little children to come unto me. . . .'"

As a man who self-admittedly was deeply influenced and helped by "Papa" Wyckoff, Judge Williams professed his open admiration and respect and traced it as far back as his own youth, when "It seemed to me that anyone who could grow up and be like Ernest Wyckoff would be of great value to the community."

The testimony of a parade of well-wishers bore that out. According to the tales told, there is virtually no aspect of the community that has not been touched in one way or another by Wyckoff, who at 86 is still the guiding spirit behind the enterprise founded by his father, Amzi B. Wyckoff 100 years ago this April.

Judge Williams ticked some of them off: The Boy Scouts ("Wyckoff and Scouting are synonymous," said Minsi Trails official Paul Davis); The Girl Scouts ("The key to Scouting is Mr. Wyckoff," said Scranton Girl Scout Council leader Mrs. George Learn); the General Hospital of Monroe County ("He led the committee that raised $35,000 to buy the first hospital building on Sarah Street," recalls trustees president Roger Dunning); the Chamber of Commerce ("He was doing things with the chamber before most of us were born," said chamber president Alan Gould Jr.).

There were more, many more, some mentioned and some understood — the church work, the community work, the help given individuals in need, and especially, always especially, children.

During the depression, Judge Williams recalled, Wyckoff did much to see that used clothing got to those children who needed it. And then, not yet satisfied, he organized the Monroe County Children's Clothing Fund because, "Children like to get something new once in a while, not always hand-me-downs."

Wyckoff had stories of his own to tell, too. On the YMCA: "Our Harrisburg representative, settling an estate, gave us the chance to buy the present site and its beautiful home for $15,000. I formed a committee, saw the man and offered $12,000 cash; what do you say?" He said, "I say get the hell out of here." We did, raised the money and paid him the $15,000."

On the Pocono Mountain Vacation Bureau, which he helped found: "I called the businessmen together, chalked up a figure on a blackboard and asked them, 'Now, what will you give?' We raised $15,000 to get it started."

On the many friends who helped him: "We were on very thin ice many times, came close to falling through. They loaned money, no questions about when it was to be repaid, and kept us going."

On the Rotary Club: "The president of East Stroudsburg State College, a young man, suggested to me we ought to start up a Rotary Club. I didn't know much about Rotary, but we got some material and started it — 53 years ago, it was."

On his many friends in the medical profession (he has been training to be a surgeon before taking over the store): "I've learned to be very nice to doctors lately; not that I've needed them, of course."

On the National Retail Merchants Assn. small store division, which he helped form: "I was president for the first five years. We went from 35 to

Ernest H. Wyckoff, honored by friends

2,000 members. It's not as active now, but it was once and could be again, if people were interested."

A man who doesn't hesitate to toss off a wry quip, Wyckoff peppered the afternoon's testimonials with salty comments, one of them a consistent, "Now do you think it's time to adjourn this meeting?"

Eventually, it was. There had been resolutions presented by the county, Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg, the Rotary Club, ESSC, the hospital. . . you name it. And in the end, it all was summed up best by Judge Williams, who admitted he didn't know the source, but quoted:

"Take him all in all, for you will not see the like of him again."

Authority mistrusts rent plan

STROUDSBURG — Members of the Housing Authority of Monroe County were warned Wednesday to carefully consider the negative aspects of a new federal housing program before considering taking part in it.

Housing authority executive director Charles VanSciver said Monroe County's getting involved in the new federal "Section 8" subsidized housing would cost the authority more than it could possibly take in.

The new program lets the authority sign contracts with individual homeowners, who in turn rent their apartment properties to eligible residents. It is, in effect, subsidized housing using a privately owned apartment unit.

"Landlords would be darn fools to sign up for the program in this county," VanSciver told authority members. "They can get top dollar for renting units by themselves. Under this program, they wouldn't get it."

VanSciver said the federal government would give the housing authority up to $9,030 a year to run a local program. He claimed it would take two full-time people to run it and the authority would end up losing money.

While authority members did not take formal action on the proposal, they agreed it did not seem to be a program they want to be involved in. A vote will be taken at their June meeting.

No more Mayor-nice-guy; E-burg to charge offenders

By HARRIET LEEDS
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — East Stroudsburg Mayor Charles Merring is tired of being a nice guy.

Disturbed by habitual offenders who ignore borough ordinances, Merring has decided to eliminate warnings except where they are mandated by law and step up prosecution.

"I took an oath to enforce the borough ordinances and state laws," Merring said, "and see the police are doing their job. That's my main job."

Merring was particularly piqued by some racing motorcyclists Tuesday. At the borough council meeting that night he let loose:

"I'm finished with warnings. I've had it. It's a waste of time and it's trying on my nerves. It's the same people all the time and we've been bending over backwards."

The mayor said different people violate different laws constantly. There are people who sprinkle their lawns when they are not supposed to, people who let their dogs run free, people who leave their garbage cans out and people who don't stop at stop signs.

Many offenses are seasonal ones — snow removal and lawn watering, for example — which the borough has reminded people of by publishing the ordinances in the newspaper.

Flyers have been sent out with borough water bills. But, as council pointed out Tuesday, only the owners get those, not the tenants.

Merring has published articles in the newspapers at considerable personal expense in an effort to explain the ordinances to borough residents.

But it seems it has been to no avail.

"Most of the habitual offenders have been warned in the past," Merring said. "It seems the only way to get results is to be nasty."

Since it is impossible to have plainclothesmen doing surveillance at the crest of every hill, Merring suggests that people complaining of motorcycle racing in their neighborhoods file a charge of harassment with the district magistrate.

The most difficult part about motorcycle violations, the mayor explained, is identifying the offender. He suggests trying to get a registration number of the vehicle or identifying the rider.

"The magistrate is the most expedient way to handle it," Merring said, "but citizens don't like to get involved."

The mayor said he is fed up with people who have to be "prodded every year."

"If everyone would be considerate of their neighbors and have pride in their community, most of these rules and regulations wouldn't be necessary," Merring concluded.

Marshalls Creek rescue call

MARSHALLS CREEK — Sixteen men with two pieces of equipment from the Marshalls Creek Rescue Squad were called out about 7:15 p.m. Wednesday when a single-car accident trapped a man in the vehicle.

Their services were not needed, however, as state police were able to extricate Bruce Freeman of 511 King St., East Stroudsburg through the passenger side door.

Free auto tow offer baits business hook

By BRUCE POSTEN
Pocono Record Reporter

DELAWARE WATER GAP — Charlie Maier needs the business, and he's expecting a Memorial Day bonus if people just know . . . where to call for a tow.

Maier, owner of Maier's Texaco Service Center off I-80 in Delaware Water Gap, is offering free 24-hour tow service for the Memorial Day weekend, beginning Saturday and ending Monday night.

"I need the business," Maier frankly admits.

"It (repair business) has really been bad recently. I'm hoping if this experiment is successful, I can offer free towing every weekend," Maier said.

Maier said the free towing service will be offered to anyone with car troubles within a 20 mile radius of his station. Geographically, that includes an area from Bushkill to Mount Pocono and Columbia, N.J. to Brodheadsville.

Although the towing is free, the destination of all disabled vehicles must be Maier's station.

"We're just hoping to increase our inside repair business. I'm not specifically out for more gas customers," Maier explained.

Maier said he is hoping for a 50 per cent increase in his towing business over last year, noting he towed about eight vehicles during the 1974 Memorial Day weekend.

With three employees who are on 24-hour call during the weekend, Maier feels he can handle quite a few auto breakdowns. He notes, however, that car owners should not expect repairs until Tuesday.

Individuals who have the misfortune of needing a free tow service should call 421-2301. Maier will accept autos covered by Triple A.

A survey of about 10 station owners in the Monroe County area showed no "business experiments" of a similar nature.

As one station owner noted, "If someone has car problems we will help them out, but we can't afford free towing. We still have to pay the men."

With towing prices averaging $1 a mile, Maier is banking on breakdowns as a boon to business during the holiday period.

Rooney prepares for surgery

WASHINGTON — Rep. Fred B. Rooney, D-15 will enter Georgetown University Hospital today and undergo surgery Friday morning for the removal of a thyroid nodule.

The thyroid abnormality was discovered during a routine physical examination last August.

Rooney, who represented Monroe County for 10 years, has been undergoing medical treatment and extensive testing since last fall.

Truck terminal possible

Stroud planners defend rezoning

STROUDSBURG — Faced with a protest from residents in the Mountainview Drive area, Stroud Township planners Wednesday tried to explain the reasoning behind the proposed commercial rezoning of a tract now zoned residential.

Victor Rodite, planning consultant from Michael Cabot Associates, did most of the talking during the afternoon session.

Tracing commercial zone outlines on four maps taped to the wall, Rodite explained the three alternative plans worked on by the planning commission and how the three were narrowed down into one plan.

The "preferred concept plan" was made public during a meeting last week. It was immediately protested by a group of Mountainview Drive residents opposed to a large tract of adjacent land being rezoned commercial from residential.

Residents claim the rezoning would only make it easy for a California-based trucking firm to build a large terminal on 51 acres it owns.

Rodite outlined the proposed and current zoning situation along Rte. 611 from Stroudsburg to Bartonsville.

He said the present strip of commercial zoning is undesirable "because it creates hazards with excess entrances and exits upon Rte. 611." The present plan is also aesthetically unattractive with strip commercial development.

A second plan, calling for nodules of commercial development along Rte. 611, would not be feasible because it would create areas of non-conforming uses in residential zones. The nodules would, however, create commercial development farther off the main highway.

The third plan for Rte. 611 calls for a segmented commercial zone, that is a larger area than in the second plan, but an area split with several residential zones, including the Mountainview Drive area.

While planners did not discard the third plan, Rodite said, they molded it into the preferred concept plan.

This plan used segmented commercial, but includes a commercial zone expanded deeper off of Rte. 611 in an area now zoned residential. It is in this area that Consolidated Freightways would like to build a terminal.

Rodite explained to the crowd that the apparently jagged lines of the commercial zone proposed come from areas of vacant land.

"We can put the nodule and in-depth concept in use where there are tracts of vacant land," Rodite said.

The 35-minute meeting was not an open meeting where public comment is allowed, Cruse said. He said the planning commission usually meets on Wednesday afternoons to go over the comprehensive plan and detail it into a final form.

Although a few persons asked general questions, Cruse would allow no general discussion of specifics. "We have a lot of work to do in these work sessions and don't want to get tied down with debates," he said.

Healy's three-run homer ruins Yankees, 4-1

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fran Healy's three-run home run in the 10th inning Wednesday night carried Kansas City to a 4-1 victory over the New York Yankees, snapping a three-game Royals' loss streak.

Chris Chambliss fumbled George Brett's grounder leading off the 10th and Cookie Rojas, after failing to sacrifice, then singled Brett to third to set the stage for Healy's blast.

Doug Bird, the last of three Royals' pitchers, got the win, his third against two losses. The Yanks opened the scoring in the sixth with an unearned run off starting pitcher, rookie Dennis Leonard. It was Leonard's error that led to his own undoing. Sandy Alomar led off with a bunt single, and after Bobby Bonds flied out, Leonard's attempted pick-off went down the right field line, allowing Alomar to go all the way to third. Alomar then scored on Elliott Maddox's sacrifice fly to left field.

The Royals tied the game in the seventh off Medich when Mayberry doubled with one out and Brett singled him home.

Ford collapses

NEW YORK (UPI) — Whitey Ford, the New York Yankees' Hall of Fame lefthander, collapsed on the dugout steps Wednesday after pitching batting practice, but was listed in "good" condition at a nearby hospital by his personal physician.

"The prognosis is good," said Dr. Lloyd Falloughs, Ford's personal physician who admitted the popular Hall of Fame pitcher to Long Island Jewish Hospital. "However, I have suggested that he (Ford) remain in the hospital for a few days as a precautionary method. More extensive tests will be made and a further determination of his prognosis will be made at that time."

Red Sox, 7-3

BOSTON (UPI) — Carl Yastrzemski's sixth career grand slam homer in the seventh inning Wednesday powered the Boston Red Sox to a 7-3 victory over the Oakland A's and a sweep of their three game series.

Bob Montgomery singled to lead off the Boston seventh and Juan Beniquez and Rick Burleson followed with singles to load the bases. Yastrzemski's homer, on a 1-1 count, landed just inside the right field foul pole to give the Red Sox a 7-2 lead.

Robinson, who has now hit two homers in one game 53 times, smacked his second homer of the year over the left field fence in the second inning and put one over the right field fence in the sixth off starter and loser Frank Tanana.

Rookie catcher Alan Ashby went to second on third baseman Rudy Meoli's throwing error in the seventh and scored what proved to be the winning run on Buddy Bell's two-out single.

Five of the Orioles' 13 hits were for extra bases. Dierker blanks Phillies; Reds rough up Seaver HOUSTON (UPI) — Milt May's bases-loaded double in the fifth inning drove in three runs that provided Larry Dierker with a big cushion and gave the Houston Astros a 4-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Wednesday night.

The Astros had scored the first run off Wayne Twitchell in the third inning. A walk to Greg Gross, Roger Metzger's single and Cesar Cedeno's sacrifice fly brought the run across.

In the fifth, Twitchell walked Gross and Metzger with none out. After Cedeno moved them up with a bunt, Bob Watson, the league's leading RBI man with 30, was purposely walked to load the bases. Jose Cruz grounded into a force at the plate but May followed with an opposite field double and cleared the bases.

NAZARETH — Southern Lehigh came from behind to push across single runs in the fourth and fifth innings Wednesday to post a 2-1 victory over Pen Argyl and capture the first baseball championship of the Colonial League in a playoff contest played at Nazareth High School.

Scott Schlechter's run-scoring triple scored Kevin Farnish in the third to tie the game at 1-1 after losing pitcher Ted Long had singled in Pen Argyl's only run and Frank Todd scored Terry Sandercock with a single in the fifth for the deciding run.

Pen Argyl took the lead with its only run in the first inning as Steve Miller walked with one out, stole second and scored on Long's single. Jim Trach and Joe Palmisano then flied to left to end the inning.

In the fourth, Farnish walked with two out and scored on Schlechter's triple. Jim Fennimore then popped to third to retire the side.

The deciding run came in the fifth as Sandercock bounced to Bob Weber at first and raced all the way to second when Weber's throw was wild and sailed past Long. Jim Schaffer walked and Todd then drove in Sandercock with his single. After Frank Bowley popped out, winner Andy Mills moved the runners up with a sacrifice, but Rick Miller bounced to second to end the inning.

Mills fanned five and allowed four walks as he gave up just five hits. Long took the loss despite allowing five hits and striking out three. He walked five.

SWIFTWATER — Rich Lutz broke a 2-2 tie with a solo home run in the fourth inning Wednesday and Chris Leauber retired the final Stroudsburg batter with runners at second and third in the seventh to preserve Pocono Mountain's 3-2 victory over Stroudsburg in an independent baseball contest.

Stroudsburg had scored single runs in the first and fourth innings before the Cardinals, now 9-10 with a game today against Pleasant Valley, scored three in their half of the fourth.

Bruce Matula reached on an error, but was forced at second on Joe Balton's bunt. Mark Dally then tripled to score Balton and continued home on a wild throw to third. Lutz' home run followed immediately for the tie-breaker.

In Stroudsburg's first, Dan Schaller singled, took second on a passed ball and scored on Al Foust's single. Foust was out at second trying to stretch the hit.

In the fourth, Foust singled, took second on a passed ball and third on a wild pitch and scored on Ken Brown's sacrifice fly to center.

Leauber came on for winner Mark Absalom in the seventh to save the victory when after two out, Jeff Wert singled, Schaller walked and both moved up on a passed ball. Leauber then forced Tim Freeman to bounce to short to end the game.

Pete Ryckman took the loss despite fanning seven and allowing just four hits.

BRODHEADSVILLE — Dean Borger singled in the only run of the game with a third inning single and Kim Scheller hurled a seven-hitter Wednesday as Pleasant Valley blanked Notre Dame of East Stroudsburg, 1-0, in an independent baseball contest.

Scheller out-duelled the Spartans' Matt Tolan as Pleasant Valley upped its record to 7-8. Tolan took the loss for the Spartans, who are now 4-7 and have gone scoreless in their last three games.

The only run of the game came with two out in the third. Kevin Conklin singled, stole second and continued on to third when the throw to second was wild and sailed into center field. Borger then singled to score the run, but Dave Zinkler's ground out ended the inning.

Notre Dame had a pair of hits in both the second and seventh innings, but could not manage to score.

Misty conditions could return for tonight's game

Indoor fog puzzles Flyers, Sabres

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — With the help of an early morning skate to clear the fog from their heads, the Flyers and Sabres took time Wednesday to puzzle over a unique development in their Stanley Cup championship.

Never before has a hockey season stretched this far into spring, and the penalty was paid Tuesday night when play had to be halted a dozen times to lift fog from the playing area.

Philadelphia goaltender Bernie Parent later admitted the conditions made it hard for him to concentrate and that he was unable to follow the puck when Rene Robert finally ended the bizarre game at 18:29 of overtime, giving Buffalo a 5-4 victory and new hope for the Stanley Cup. The Flyers still lead in the best-of-seven series, 2-1.

Although the game ended at midnight, Philadelphia was back in Memorial Auditorium for a compulsory practice at 9:30 Wednesday morning, at which time the fog was a prominent subject of discussion.

"You know what we're going to do tomorrow night?" asked Terry Crisp. "We're all going to wear a miner's helmet so we can see in the dark."

Larry Carriere of Buffalo had his own solution, saying, "We're all going to tie fans around our back and cool the place off."

There is every likelihood the fog will be back for Thursday night's fourth game with summer-like weather conditions in Buffalo and Flyer Coach Fred Shero promised a lot more stoppages of play than Tuesday night, when players from both benches came out to skate despite occasional protest from the referee, Lloyd Gil-mour.

"The heck with the referee," said Shero. "All I know is we're going to spring on the ice whenever we think it's necessary. He has no right to interfere in these matters. A guy can get killed in those conditions, and even a hockey player doesn't make that much money."

"Some rules are made to be broken. Just because a rule is a rule doesn't mean it's right."

Nicklaus adds glitter to Danny Thomas field

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — The chairman of the Danny Thomas Memphis Classic feigned surprise when Jack Nicklaus showed up for the first time in seven years to play in the golf tournament that begins Thursday.

"I see you, but I still don't believe it," Vernon Bell said when the five-time Masters champion arrived for his first look at the 7,193-yard, par-72 Colonial Country Club course.

"It's me," the Golden Bear said, grinning.

The last time Nicklaus played Memphis, the tournament was held on a 6,300-yard course inside the city limits. The country club, and the tournament, moved to the present suburban location in 1972.

"I liked that old course," Nicklaus told Bell, "but it was just too short. You had to shoot 65 every day just to stay in contention."

The Golden Bear has won here only once. In 1965, he defeated Johnny Pott in a playoff to earn $9,000. This year's winner will receive $35,000 from a total purse of $175,000.

Nicklaus figures his chances of taking home the biggest check are good.

"I like to play a course that requires real golf to win on," the 35-year-old superstar said as he prepared for Wednesday's pro-am event. "In my early years on the tour, a lot of the tournaments we played boiled down to putting contests."

Five-year contract worth reported $600,000

USC's Davis signs with WFL Sun

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Anthony Davis, University of Southern California's All-America running back, signed a five-year, $2.5 million contract with the World Football League Southern California Sun Tuesday to become the nation's first major college player to go with the WFL this year.

The 21-year-old Davis, runner-up in the Heisman Trophy balloting last year to Archie Griffin and NCAA record holder for kickoff returns, drove away from the Sun news conference in a new Rolls Royce, also part of his multi-year deal.

"I signed a five-year contract for $2.5 million," Davis later told UPI. "Plus the Rolls Royce."

Earlier, a spokesman for the WFL team said the contract was for $600,000 over five years.

Davis, rated small by some pro scouts because he stands only 5-foot-9 inches and weighs 183 pounds, was a second-round draft choice of the New York Jets of the National Football League, but they apparently did not come up with enough money.

"I'm glad the negotiations are over," Davis told the news conference at Anaheim Stadium, the Orange County home of the Sun. "I like Southern California, I like the fans and I wanted to stay here. I'm happy with my contract."

Davis also was a standout baseball player at USC, and was offered a professional contract with the Minnesota Twins, which he turned down.

"I just looked at my three years of football at USC and decided for football," said Davis.

The elusive tailback ruined autumn Saturdays for many teams, but his most explosive performances were against Notre Dame.

He scored six touchdowns against the Irish as a sophomore in 1972, then last year romped to four touchdowns, including a 102-yard kickoff return, as USC defeated Notre Dame 55-24.

Davis also was the first player to run for more than 1,000 yards for three successive seasons in the Pacific-8, and became the greatest rusher in USC history, gaining 3,724 yards in 748 carries and scoring 52 touchdowns — bettering the marks of USC Heisman Trophy winners O.J. Simpson and Mike Garrett.

The Sun, under new management this year after a shaky financial start in 1974, gave Davis a contract that reportedly is "personally guaranteed by the club, league and Sun owner Sam Battistone," according to a source close to the player.

The Sun backfield this season also will include former Oakland Raider quarterback Daryl Lamonica.

The Sun last year signed several highly-rated college players including UCLA runners James McAlister and Kermit Johnson, and USC tackle Booker Brown, all of whom have since bolted to the NFL.

Tom Fears, Sun head coach, welcomed Davis and said, "He has great talent. The NFL has a stigma against small players but we like to look at their determination and heart."

Joe interested in WFL contract

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (UPI) — Joe Namath played a round of golf in the town where he went to college as his attorneys and lawyers for the World Football League (WFL) tried Wednesday to iron out the rough spots in a proposed $4 million contract.

Namath, who played collegiate ball for the University of Alabama, has played out his option with the New York Jets of the National Football League and is free to sign with any team he chooses.

The WFL's Chicago Wind has offered Namath, a 10-year veteran pro quarterback, who said he expects to play pro football "three more years at least," a $4 million contract.

"It's an interesting contract, but a lot of points need to be ironed out before I sign with New York or Chicago," Namath said during a recent interview.

Namath said money was not the prime consideration for making the switch "at this stage in negotiations. I think what the Wind is offering is fair, maybe more than fair. I want to play football and I'll play for Chicago if the deal is proper."

Namath has been sidelined numerous times by injuries, mostly knee problems. Though he said he could play another three years if he stayed healthy, the quarterback said he could not accurately predict how much longer he would play football because "it depends on what kinds of injuries come up in the future."

The WFL's stability, Namath said, did not concern him because "there are some very smart people behind the league at this time and if anyone can make it work they can."

Raymond Pocono Mt. speaker

SWIFTWATER — Delaware football coach Tubby Raymond will be the guest speaker Saturday, May 31, when Pocono Mountain High School holds its annual athletic awards banquet.

The buffet-style meal will be served beginning at 6:30 p.m. The affair annually honors athletes at the school.

Athletic Director Ed Watto said Wednesday that tickets for the banquet will be available at the high school gymnasium Tuesday. Tickets are priced at $6 per person.

Final McLaren overhaul complete for Rutherford

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — When Johnny Rutherford squeezes his frame into the narrow cockpit of a Team McLaren racer for carburetion tests Thursday, it will be the defending champion's last contact with the car until he suits up Sunday for the Indianapolis 500 auto classic.

"This is it," says Tyler Alexander, a Bostonian who is McLaren's director of engineering. "We've stripped the car down to the last nut and bolt and completely rebuilt it. Now we must make sure that everything was put back properly. It's the final race check."

Alexander feels, however, that carburetion day is conducted too far in advance of the race.

"It's not the perfect situation to take a cold car into the race. Having the testing on Saturday would be more ideal. There's still time to fix anything you feel is wrong."

Alexander says that with all the safety measures conducted by track officials, the most important may be overlooked — the welfare of the driver in this instance.

"Anything can happen three days after the final testing of engine and body. The car is cooled down and the driver hasn't been behind the wheel for 72 hours. I certainly believe those last checks should be held 24 hours before the race."

In the case of Rutherford's car, McLaren's engineering major domo said there were no big changes made, except some chassis design, in the car that swept from near the back of the starting grid to win the 1974 Indy race.

"The main thing is to run the entire 500 miles without problems," says the blonde mechanic. "Obviously, that's what it's all about. Our chances are better than most drivers and we aren't conceding the race to anybody."

This statement was an oblique reference to the way pole sitter A.J. Foyt has virtually psyched the field.

Schembechler Mountie speaker

STROUDSBURG — Michigan football coach Bo Schembechler will be the featured guest speaker Monday, June 2, when Stroudsburg High School holds its 24th annual Varsity "S" all-sports banquet at the Fernwood.

Tickets are available for the dinner and are priced at $8.50.

This will be the first visit to the Lehigh Valley area for Schembechler on a speaking engagement, although he did visit Stroudsburg on occasion while successfully recruiting Frank Bell.

Schembechler has a career coaching record of 98-23-4 compiled in six years at Miami of Ohio and the last six seasons at Michigan. Schembechler's Big Ten coaching record is 58-7 and he coached the Wolverines to an undefeated season in 1973, four successive Big Ten titles and also gained Big Ten Coach of the Year honors in 1972. He was voted national Coach of the Year in 1969, his first season at Michigan.

Tickets for the affair are on sale at Lim's Sport Shop and Fred Galozzo's Barber Shop on Eighth Street in Stroudsburg.

CHARITABLE SWING — To Betty Patterson's mock dismay, Bill Blackburn putts with a tennis racket as the two members of the Arthritis Foundation Committee get in some practice for the June 18 "Take a Swing at Arthritis" golf and tennis tournaments. The golf tourney will be played at Shawnee Inn and Country Club and will include a buffet luncheon, golf, prizes, golf carts and greens fees for $20, with nearly half going to the local arthritis chapter. The tennis tourney will be played at Shawnee and East Stroudsburg State College. (Staff photo by Brian Heller)

NATURE'S ARTISTRY — Threatening clouds in various contrasts slowly drift across the Hoosier landscape shortly after a May thunderstorm near Wallace, Ind. (UPI)

Recent statement a puzzler

Wallace — worthy of Metternich?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The story is told that Prince von Metternich was awakened one morning at the Council of Vienna with the news that the foreign minister of one of the other countries in attendance had died during the night.

Metternich, ever the cunning diplomat, is said to have gazed at the ceiling and asked "Now, what do you suppose he meant by that?"

Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama now has given us the kind of conundrum worthy of no one less than the wily old Austrian. What do you suppose Wallace had in mind when he observed in a recent interview that the United States may have been fighting on the wrong side in World War II?

No need to strain ourselves trying to figure it out: Wallace himself explained his meaning a few days later. What he meant was that the United States should have been friendlier to Germany and Japan after World War I. That way, he said, Hitler and the Japanese militarists would never have been able to rise to power and the second global war would not have occurred.

The governor is certainly not the first person to suggest that the Treaty of Versailles had a great deal to do with the creation of a Germany in which Hitler was able to rise to power. And, there are those who hold the opinion that by imposing a boycott on strategic materials for Japan, the United States provoked Pearl Harbor.

So perhaps the governor was simply restating a rather basic proposition: drive a person or a nation into a corner and you will have a fight on your hands.

And, if that is so, perhaps it helps explain some of the things that Wallace has said and done during his years in the public arena.

For example, we know that when he declared "Segregation today, segregation tomorrow, segregation forever" at his first inaugural in Montgomery, he didn't really mean it because just last year he crowned a black homecoming queen at the University of Alabama.

And, we know that in 1968 when he was the presidential candidate of the American party, he didn't really mean "there's not a dime's worth of difference" between the Democratic and Republican parties because this year he is back in the Democratic ranks and is about to announce.

And we can guess that the governor is just funning when he tells audiences that "big government" is the cause of most of this country's troubles, because he has also said he would see to it as president that the United States was the world's strongest military power and that he would solve the crime problem in the nation's capital by stationing a soldier on every street corner.

So it appears the governor has updated Theodore Roosevelt's famous dictum about foreign policy into a theory of government that says "Speak loudly but keep your options open."

Attorneys may be next for malpractice auctions

NEW YORK (UPI) — With the medical malpractice insurance uproar still on the front pages, the legal profession seems next in line for a wave of malpractice lawsuits and insurance problems.

Research Group, Inc., which has offices in Charlottesville, Va., Cambridge, Mass., Ann Arbor, Mich., and Berkeley, Calif., says legal malpractice suits already have begun to surge and insurance rates for attorneys have gone up about 35 per cent in the past two years on the average.

So far the insurance companies have not threatened to cut off legal malpractice coverage in any state as some companies have pulled out of the medical malpractice insurance business in some states.

And the 35 per cent increase in medical malpractice rates is modest compared to increases of 1,000 per cent or more in recent years in some localities in the price of medical malpractice coverage.

But Walter Morrison, president of the Research Group, said "the lawyers soon may be threatened by large insurance rate increases and potential termination of coverage."

Morrison did not make the point but if legal malpractice insurance costs do go up sharply there will be a certain irony. Many medical groups have criticized lawyers for contributing heavily to the rising cost of medical malpractice coverage by the way in which they handle malpractice suits.

Most medical malpractice suits are filed by lawyers on speculative contingency fees, a quarter to one-third of whatever is recovered. Often the attorney advances some essential initial court costs to his client.

Morrison said although the first legal malpractice suit on record in the United States was filed way back in 1796, malpractice did not become much of a bugaboo for lawyers until three or four years ago.

"Very few suits were successful in the past. Now an increasing number are successful, particularly if the lawyer is accused of mistakes or willful offenses in connection with violations of the federal securities laws," he said.

Undoubtedly, Morrison said, in addition to the impetus given to legal malpractice suits by the rise of suits against doctors, the Securities and Exchange Commission created a climate favoring such suits by its 1973 complaint in the National Student Marketing Corp. securities fraud case. In that case, the SEC named a prominent Wall Street law firm, one of the biggest in the country, as defendants along with National Student Marketing executives.

Morrison said a legal malpractice suit can ruin or harm a lawyer's reputation, even if he wins it, if local prejudice is sufficiently aroused.

Morrison estimated that in some communities 90 per cent of the lawyers carry malpractice insurance while in other places as few as 65 per cent do.

Naked folks frolic

By DOUGLAS STANGLIN
United Press International
Naked surfers and sun worshippers by the thousands are frolicking along American beaches this year. Their raw presence has many a local official thumbing lawbooks.

Skinny dippers already have been waved off many beaches, but at others from Florida to California the sun-tan-all-over set is flourishing.

Cape Cod's secluded Truro Beach is one popular spot for nude bathers. But this year, just before the swimming season began, a nervous National Park Service banned nudity at Cape Cod National Seashore.

In Los Angeles, increased pressure from skinny dippers last year to open up portions of the beach to nudists forced a heated debate in the City Council. Despite a strong pronudist lobby—including one man who showed up naked in council chambers—the council banned nude sunbathing.

Despite the Los Angeles ban, nudity marches on at numerous California beaches, including Venice Beach, Malibu, Point Dume, Zuma Beach, and possibly 50 other locations along the coast.

Probably the most widely used beach is a 900-foot stretch of sand in north San Diego, which the City Council has designated "swim suit optional." Up to 6,000 nude bathers use the beach daily, and the "Nude Beaches Committee" is urging the optional zone be extended by 2,300 feet.

The biggest breakthrough for nudists may come this year in New York state.

The case involves 25-year-old Dian Hardy who was arrested on a Long Island beach five years ago for sunning in the nude. She was convicted of public lewdness and fined $100.

Last May, however, a state appeals court overturned the conviction, saying "lewdness can not be presumed for the mere fact of nudity. There must be a showing of lewd conduct."

The ruling leaves prosecutors in a quandary.

Suffolk County Assistant District Attorney Ronald Lipetz says each case of public nudity now will be treated on individual merits.

"If it involves a person who is just lying on the beach, then I'd say we had a very, very weak case," he said. "But if really lewd conduct is involved—obscene actions—then a charge could properly be drawn."

The new wave of nudism is far from the old image of secluded camps, high fences and endless rounds of volleyball.

Today's nudity buff can be found just around the nearest sand dune.

South of San Francisco, Santa Cruz County officials—anticipating a rash of nakedness—passed an antinudity ordinance last fall affecting all county land on the coast.

The only location excepted is a cold, windy, and almost inaccessible spot.

The Santa Cruz ban, however, is only against removing the bottoms of bathing suits—not tops. The county attorney has advised that a ban against women swimming topless—but not men—would amount to sex discrimination.

The same problem surfaced last year at Cocoa Beach, Fla., when the city refused to set aside a section of the beach for topless swimming. A roar from feminists, charging sex discrimination, failed to budge the commission, but the controversy has simmered. Topless sunbathing is still evident.

Also in Florida, a section of Key Biscayne has been a haven for the naked for a number of years on an isolated section of Crandon Beach.

This spring, police raided the beach and charged 10 persons with indecent exposure. But the Dade County Commission, which operates the park on the island last week has refused to take a stand.

Near Austin, Tex., home of the University of Texas, skinny-dippers and Texas law have been at odds for several years over a sunbathing spot known as Hippie Hollow. Now both sides have apparently reached a truce.

"We in the Sheriff's Department do not set moral standards for our citizens," said Travis County Sheriff Raymond Frank, who is responsible for conduct at the swimming site on Lake Travis.

Record begins expansion of Broad St. facility

STROUDSBURG — Construction has begun on a 3,240-square foot addition at The Pocono Record.

The main purpose of the expansion, according to Alan Gould Jr., publisher, is to provide extra storage space for newsprint. The addition will almost triple the present capacity of 30-day supply.

The construction will extend a portion of the present building 18 feet closer to Broad Street and add a storage building and garage totaling 2,500 square feet on the southeast corner.

The addition will extend to the present property line of the newspaper on Broad Street, A two-family house at 91-93 Broad, which The Record has owned for several years, will be demolished to continue access to the rear of the plant for deliveries.

Construction is budgeted at $105,000 and will include improvements for other departments. The mailroom will be expanded through the additional 18 feet on the eastern end of the building. This will also allow for additional press units in the future. Garages at the south end of the addition will be used by the four circulation trucks with two garages in the present building used for storage of other materials.

Another garage in the present building will be converted into additional office space for the accounting department and the circulation department.

The contractor is Edinger Construction Co. Frederick Forsyth Jr. is the architect.

Living cost hike hurts mart

NEW YORK (UPI) — A cost of living increase triggered broad-based profit taking Wednesday and sent prices to their worst loss in three weeks on the New York Stock Exchange. Trading was sluggish.

The setback led many analysts to speculate a long-awaited adjustment from the year's unprecedented gains had arrived in full force. But most observers took a wait-and-see position.

Alaska's first native-owned bank to open in fall

KOTZEBUE, Alaska (UPI) — Like a couple of Beverly Hillbillies in reverse, two California bankers are coming to the mountains of Alaska to guide the growth of the state's first native-owned bank.

"It's a very interesting challenge," says veteran banker Arnold Gietz, former president of the Beverly Hills National Bank, who will be at the helm of the United Bank of Alaska when it opens its doors in Anchorage Oct. 1.

For all his 28 years in banking and finance, Gietz says he is excited about his new post in which he will have the support of cashier Richard Burd, a former associate at the Beverly Hills bank.

At Kotzebue recently to meet with native leaders whose corporations will hold controlling interest in UBA, Gietz said he is much more enthused now with prospects of the bank than when he started out in January.

The UBA, which will begin operation with $3 million in assets, represents a major investment of five corporations formed under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act: NANA Regional Corporation, Inc., Kotzebue; Bristol Bay Native Corporation, Dillingham; Cook Inlet Native Corporation, Anchorage; Doyon, Limited, Fairbanks, and the Calista Corporation, Bethel. Each has purchased about $600,000 worth of shares.

With the exception of the 12 directors, who are required to purchase 50 shares of stock each at $30 per share, all stock is and will remain owned by the five corporations.

The directors include two representatives of each native corporation, plus Gietz and Barney Gottstein, a prominent Anchorage businessman.

"UBA will be a full service bank to all people in Alaska, but also sympathetic to the needs of natives," Gietz says.

The bank will work with the native community to develop commerce and industry, which will in turn create additional employment.

Gietz says UBA will start out using experienced banking personnel but involve itself in a continuous training program to teach native people to run the bank.

Gietz has had experience working with minority groups in the Los Angeles area. He acknowledges that the new bank will have unique problems because of the state's vast expanse and sparse population.

One of the unique services the UBA will look into is fly-in bank service.

"There is a possibility of a flying branch, to give banking facilities to certain villages on certain days of the week," Gietz says. "Probably within a year, we'll be able to determine its feasibility."

High school nuclear class given college-level lab

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Pennsylvania's pioneering high school nuclear science program — a model for 42 states and eight foreign countries — has landed a free, $750,000 college-level laboratory on wheels.

John McDermott, senior science adviser to the state Education Department, said the mobile radioisotope lab built for the old Atomic Energy Commission will serve nuclear science students in a record 190 Pennsylvania school districts in the 1975-76 school year.

McDermott, who developed the nuclear science course over an eight-year period, said 30 new districts will add the program starting this fall.

The Education Department has been invited to send a representative to Scotland next August to outline the secondary school nuclear program before an international conference on "projects with the most significance for physics."

McDermott said three mobile labs used by the Atomic Energy Commission were destined for mothballs as a budgetary saving before the state won a three-year loan of one lab.

Operation of the big lab is being funded by a federal grant obtained through the Lackawanna County intermediate school unit.

Jack Brenizer, of Penn State University, instructs the classes of eight-at-a-time crowded into the equipment-packed unit that first became available a few weeks ago.

Since Pennsylvania's pilot program began in 1968 with eight school districts, the number of students involved has grown to some 2,700 this year.

McDermott said over 100 nuclear science classes a year also visit the Brazeale nuclear reactor at Penn State for hands-on nuclear experimentation programs.

"They learn to transmute one element into another and then identify it by its characteristics — the dream of Merlin and all the other alchemists," McDermott said.

"They work directly with the reactor and determine the critical mass — the amount of fuel that must be put into the reactor to keep it operating."

McDermott said the mobile lab classes will be centered at intermediate units.

33 countries for mini-United Nations

UPI Foreign News Analyst

In Kingston, Jamaica, on May 6, representatives of 33 nations with a combined population of 900 million concluded a meeting of an organization unique in the world.

Once it was called the British Commonwealth of Nations. That name was used for the last time in 1944. Since 1948 it has been simply the Commonwealth of Nations, each free to speak, none formally bound by any decision the majority may reach.

Through the years, differences have abounded — it nearly broke up in 1971 over British supply of arms to white supremacist South Africa — but proof of its vitality is the fact it continues to grow.

Once a white man's club, the whites now are heavily outnumbered.

Indian Vice President Sir S. Radhakrishnan spoke for all when he said in 1955: "Commonwealth means for us complete independence and informal association, sharing of ideals, though not of allegiance, of purposes though not of loyalties, common discussions ... not binding decisions."

Once an instrument of the British Foreign Office to hold the pound sterling area together, the Jamaica meeting illustrated the extent of the organization's evolution.

There was a trooping of the colors and a visit by the queen.

But British Prime Minister Harold Wilson's economic proposals were voted down and Britain itself went farther than it probably otherwise would have in approving plans to intensify economic sanctions against the white minority government of break-away Rhodesia.

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — Mixed influences. Confusion could reign if you are not on guard. Do not let slight misunderstandings blow into a storm. Use your wits.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Stellar aspects fairly favorable, but you may have to work a little harder for benefits. Also, two admonitions: Avoid the bizarre and DO be careful if dealing with strangers.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — Trouble-free performance should be yours this day. Direct your efforts astutely to encompass all essentials. Pet projects should go over with a bang.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Expand in operations going well, setting a better pace for speedier results. Stress your fine organizational ability.

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — Certain persons may make irresponsible statements: Do not be trapped, or follow any suggestion without investigating for truth.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Some unusual development in the making will affect you pleasantly. Especially favored now: romance, travel, outdoor interests.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — Good stellar influences, but a few "tricky" spots will bear watching. Properly alert, however, you can eradicate them and go on to bigger and better things.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22) — Fine cooperation from others indicated; also the possibility of an interesting proposition. Once you have checked its potentials, act accordingly.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — You may have to revise some plans now. Others may assist somewhat but, in general, you must draft your own alterations. Be prepared for the unexpected.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — Straying off the beaten path not advisable. You'll find more opportunities, greater satisfaction in activities close to home.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — A creative idea could prove more remunerative than you suppose. Fine gains indicated if you play your cards right.

PICES (February 20 to March 20) — Indications are that a bit of luck is coming your way. Take a chance — especially in an activity that stimulates your imagination.

YOU BORN TODAY have an alert, inquiring mind; are usually physically dexterous, too. However, your temperament at times, is too explosive for stability, so you MUST learn to control nerves and temper. You are an idealist, a deep thinker, and are endowed with the talents required to succeed in music, painting and writing.

The bidding:

South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 4 NT Pass
5 ♣ Pass 7 ♠

Opening lead — jack of hearts.

A reader from South Bend, Indiana, sends me this hand which arose in his regular Saturday night husband-wife bridge game.

The bidding was certainly not scientific — in effect, North bid a grand slam on the naive assumption that the three aces shown by South in response to Blackwood would produce 13 tricks.

It's hard to quarrel with North's assumption, since South actually made the grand slam — although she must have suffered a severe shock upon finding herself declarer at seven spades without a trump in her hand!

West led the jack of hearts, won in dummy with the queen, and declarer played five rounds of trumps, producing this seven-card position:

West
♠ 10 8 6 5
♥ J 7
♦ 7 4 3 2
♣ 8 4 2

East
♠ 4 2
♥ 10 8 5 3 2
♦ K Q 5
♣ K J 7

South
♠ A 9 6 4
♥ A J 9 6
♦ A 10 9 6 3

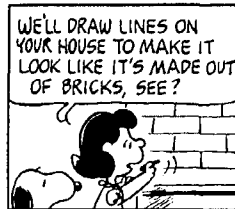

West
♠ 10 8 6 5
♥ J 7
♦ 7 4 3 2
♣ 8 4 2

East
♠ 4 2
♥ 10 8 5 3 2
♦ K Q 5
♣ K J 7

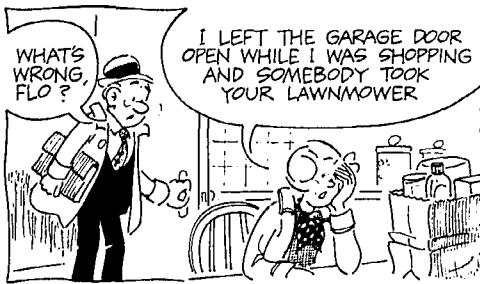

South
♠ A 9 6 4
♥ A J 9 6
♦ A 10 9 6 3

Declarer — who had started with 12 tricks and was hoping somehow or other to acquire a 13th — now led the seven of spades, placing East under excruciating pressure. It did not matter whether East discarded a heart — a diamond or a club — in all these cases East would yield the crucial 13th trick to declarer.

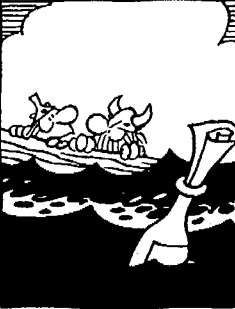

So South made the grand slam, which was worth 2,510 points. North had the satisfaction of having successfully taken a shot at a grand slam, while South had the satisfaction of having made seven spades with a trumpless hand.

New motto for throwaway fighters

By GAIL NEVINS
"Don't Buy Throwaways . . . Borrow Returnables!!!" is the new motto of the Pennsylvania Alliance for Returnables, Inc. (PAR) an information-action coalition centered in Harrisburg for hopefully effective lobbying results for deposit containers.

The latest newsletter of the environmental-consumer group states that the Environmental Protection Agency is preparing a set of rules that will ban both the sale and use of throwaway cans and bottles at military commissaries, federal cafeterias and all other federal installations in the country.

John Skinner of the agency's Office of Solid Waste Management stated at an EPA sponsored meeting on waste reduction that the rules are presently planned to be ready by early fall. He believes that they will serve as a precedent for private business.

Skinner also stated that EPA's position on the proposed federal law to ban throwaways is still that of favorable provided that it did not cause unemployment or economic disruption in the glass and aluminum industries.

In line with this concept is a study conducted by a New York Senate Task Force which predicts that a net employment GAIN of 4,000 jobs would result from mandatory deposit legislation in addition to cost savings for the consumer and taxpayer.

"No-deposit No-return" is the name of the study and is available at no charge from Steve Sloan, Director, State Senate Task Force on Critical Choices, The Capitol, Albany, N.Y. 12224.

PAR further relates that a member of the "endangered species" list, a bottler for returnables, has spoken out down in Texas.

N. E. Norton, a Texas bottler and president of the Crusade For a Cleaner Environment, recently spoke out against container and retailing industries that are spending millions of dollars opposing bottle bills in legislatures and courts.

Norton believes that they should join the consumers and small bottlers in supporting a return to returnables and gave as reasons: "Consumers pay more for throwaway cans and bottles, taxpayers foot high bills for litter pickup and solid waste disposal and precious energy and natural resources are squandered on container production."

Another bottler in the know about profits and returnable containers told a recent beverage industry newsletter,

"We've got to give consumers something to get soft drink sales moving again. The only thing that will work that I know is lower prices, and the only way I can meet that is with returnables."

Here in Pennsylvania Dr.

Priscilla Laws of Dickinson College in Carlisle, is directing research on the economic impact that a bottle law would have in the state. The study should be completed by the end of May and copies will be available from PAR upon request (they're at Box 472, Federal Square Station, Harrisburg, Pa. 17108).

Down in Maryland the constitutionality of the Bowie mandatory deposit ordinance was upheld this year by a 6-1 majority of the Maryland Supreme Court. Although the law was passed in 1971, it was never enforced because of a court challenge by bottlers, retailers and container manufacturers.

Zebra plant care

By GEORGE ABRAHAM
ZEBRA PLANT CARE: The aphelandra or zebra plant is one of the finest foliage plants we grow, but they can be temperamental. It likes a bright window, but NOT direct sun. Also, the top should be pinched back to encourage bushiness. If unpinched, it will grow straight up. When you pinch the top out, root it in a vase of plain tap water, on in perlite or vermiculite. The flower blossom (yellow) can be snipped off as soon as it has faded. Flowers won't show up unless the plant is getting sufficient light. Direct sun will cause the foliage to burn around the tips. Some cupping of the leaves is natural. Poor drainage or too much water will also encourage cupping of foliage.

H O M E G R O W N TOMATOES: How are your tomatoes doing? If they have a purplish color on the leaves, look for a phosphorus shortage. Also, sometimes a low temperature will cause the same problem. If phosphorus shortage is the reason, you can apply a liquid plant food over the foliage. What falls to the ground will not be wasted, but absorbed by the roots.

WHY SHRUBS DON'T BLOOM: You're probably wondering why shrubs (or trees) do not blossom. We'll list a few reasons so you can pin point the trouble yourself: (1) Too rich a soil. Excess nitrogen gives lots of leaves and discourages flower bud formation. Stop feeding. You can cut down on the amount of nitrogen plants take up, by root pruning. Insert a spade vertically into the soil at various places around the plant, going out as far as the branch spread. Severing roots stops uptake of some of the nitrogen. (2) Too much shade. Heavy branches overhead will shut out light, as will a garage or some other building. Plants will bloom better in a well lighted spot.

(3) Competition with nearby tree and shrub roots for moisture and nutrients. (4) Age. Some plants, especially fruit trees rarely bear much before 5 years of age. Sooner or later they'll bear. (5) Weather conditions. Frost during blossoming period kills buds; also severe winter cold will often kill buds, hence no flowers. Those buds closest to the ground may survive.

(6) Pruning at the wrong time of year will remove flower buds. Try pruning shrubs right after blooming period is over and you won't remove next year's flower buds. (7) Deep planting. Sometimes plants are set in too deeply, causing a lack of oxygen around the roots.

Poor drainage or too much water will cause the same problem.
GREEN THUMB CLINIC: "Our roses have developed black spots on leaves. What can be done to prevent this?"
Ans: Spray with Captan or Benlate, or a mixture of the two.

Hollywood helps toy manufacturer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Even in the middle of a recession, a man with energy and ideas can make a business grow spectacularly.

Take Martin B. Abrams, who has brought Mego International, Inc., in two and a half years from a humdrum maker of nondescript toys to a firm with sales in the $35-$40 million a year range, a gain of 125 per cent.

He did it by tying his toys to Hollywood, not only such recent Hollywood characters as those from Planet of the Apes but to the legendary figures of the Wizard of Oz and the heroes of early TV and radio, Superman, Batman and Robin and the Green Hornet.

It would make a better story to say Marty Abrams, 32, was 100 per cent self-made, but he inherited control of Mego and had the advantage of a degree in marketing from New York University.

His father, David Abrams, still is chairman of the company. Nowadays, however, father stays in Hong Kong supervising the company's production.

You have to be a maverick to go far and fast in the toy business today," Martin Abrams says, "and you have to work awful hard and enjoy your work."

In catapulting Mego from 300th place to the top ten in the $3 billion a year toy industry, Abrams did a number of unconventional things. For one, he decided if a big mail order house such as Sears, Roebuck could sell toys the year around, so could Mego. Traditionally, small toymakers had depended on the Christmas season for 75 per cent of their business.

But after he had spent money tooling up for his proprietary toys keyed to Hollywood and TV characters, he decided on a tremendous consumer advertising campaign in the August dog days. Competitors scoffed but the sales were so good department stores began stocking up on Mego toys.

He admits it takes energy more than imagination to build a toy business around famous movie and TV characters. "You have to keep up though," he insisted. He is now bringing out toy figures of the characters in the popular TV series, The Waltons. He expects they will do as well as the Planet of the Apes line.

Film director has big act to follow

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jon Frankenheimer is following a tough act, "The French Connection" — which won five 1971 Academy Awards, including best picture — with a new epic, "French Connection II."

His star is Gene Hackman who copped the Oscar for best actor in the original.

Moreover, Bill Friedkin won the award for best direction.

How can a sequel improve on that record?

"It doesn't, because this isn't a sequel," said Frankenheimer, one of Hollywood's most successful directors.

"This is a story about a junkie cop, Hackman, and what happens to him when he is forcefully hooked. The heavy is Fernando Rey, the same actor who played the part so well the first time. And the entire film was shot in Marseilles, France."

"I adapted this story into a 'French Connection' format. But there is no real tie to the first picture. Audiences can enjoy my movie without having had to see 'The French Connection.'"

"This picture comes along four years later and there's a whole new audience for it."

Frankenheimer, whose film will be released this week, is experiencing the worst sort of labor pains. He devoted a year and a half of his life to the film's gestation. And now he is at the mercy of the box office.

The director is suffering very real physical and emotional anguish awaiting his baby's reception.

"On the eve of a picture's release I wake up at night writing notes to myself, making sure every theater's projection equipment is in good shape," he said.

"I work on publicity, advertising and fight to get the studio behind it. It's not like the old days when a director made his picture and turned to a new project, leaving everything in the studio's hands."

"These days you have to be sure the studio doesn't support the pictures of other directors and allow yours to just lie there."

"It's worse than giving birth to a baby. Today a movie is a hit or a flop. There's more money at stake. You either lose everything or make a fortune."

"There's no such thing as a nice little picture which earns its money back. No one wants to produce that sort of film. A great deal of my future rides on every picture I make."

Scott Joplin's opera opens spring festival

HOUSTON (UPI) — Ragtime composer Scott Joplin's only opera, "Treemonisha," the sweet folk fable of Negroes in the New South, opens the spring opera festival Friday with new orchestration in a bold quality production by Houston Grand Opera.

Known as "King of Ragtime" in his day, Joplin, the rinky-tink piano player from Texarkana, Tex., did not intend for the work he published in 1911 to be a ragtime opera.

He intentionally emulated the "serious" music he had heard at the Metropolitan Opera and European touring company performances and wrote the piece containing all the elements of grand opera — an overture, instrumental preludes, solo arias, duets, ensembles and recitatives.

Set in the composer's native

Texas-Arkansas country during the Reconstruction era, Treemonisha is about the plight of the newly freed slaves who, because they lack education, fall easy prey to evil conjurers. Joplin also touches on the concept of women's liberation when his 18-year-old heroine becomes the leader of her people.

"This is probably the one work most indigenous to America's musical culture and deserves a quality production during a period we are celebrating our heritage," said David Gockley, Houston Grand Opera general director.

Directing the opera, which will be performed at the Miller Outdoor Theater in Herman Park, is New Yorker Francis Corrado, who previously directed "Lulu."

Wyckoff's Wyckoff Shopper

Chances are you will NEVER see a real honest-to-goodness "Sapphire Fairy" ... but TODAY you certainly will see a more than "reasonably accurate facsimile" displayed in our gift department at Wyckoff's. This beautiful lady ... the fantasy of Milford artist, Arthur Laurens Brennan ... is visiting Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and we feel very privileged to present her! I am sure you've heard about her, and read Bruce Posten's fine article on Mr. Brennan in the Pocono Record on May 7th! I was fascinated by it ... and the fact that this beguiling creature is now a "treasure" in the collection of a local resident! He was lucky enough to "woo and win her" at a recent auction in Belvidere; and with her, the tale of disappointment and frustration that followed this talented artist who died, never realizing that one day the public WOULD appreciate his special "world" of beauty!!

The "Sapphire Fairy visiting the Bayberry" was painted in 1915; and was apparently completed on New Year's Eve. She has a very poignant appeal ... as her expression supposedly depicts the sorrow of Brennan's wife over her husband's failure to gain that elusive critical acclaim. Mr. Posten told us that though there is no recorded proof, the "Sapphire Fairy" might be familiar to some persons as the illustration that adorned early soda bottles, including 7-UP and White Rock; and that the current 7-UP television commercial uses a "mod" fairy that is strikingly similar to Brennan's original! Come meet her today ... it may be your only chance to EVER meet a "Sapphire Fairy!"

Just thinking about "The Sapphire Fairy" made me very wistful, remembering the hours that were pure magic ... hours spent reading "fairy story books" in my childhood. I suddenly wondered, in this "modern" world, if mothers were still reading "fairy stories" to their wee folk; and investigation proved that they certainly are. Our book department has the big Grosset and Dunlap "Treasury of Fairy Tales," the classic "Grimm's Fairy Tale Book," and the world of delight found between the covers of the Golden Books. Today's taste in reading, influenced by the fine television program, "Little House on the Prairie," has brought all of the Laura Ingalls Wilder stories into demand; and, of course, the beloved characters of the Beatrix Potter stories, beloved and beautiful ... along with A.A. Milne's "Winnie The Pooh," are standards in any child's library. New in the last few years, and gaining fast in the popularity polls ... Richard Scarry's books that approach reading and learning with fresh innovative text and illustrations. His "Best Story Book Ever" is great ... and we also have his "What Do People Do All Day" and "Cars, Trucks, and Things That Go."

The world of "fantasy" ... in art ... in fiction ... BOTH ... at Wyckoff's in Stroudsburg TODAY!!!!!!
